UNIVERSITY UPDATE

• The Oregon Children's Choir will perform at a seasonal open house at the University Museum of Art at 2:30 p.m. Dec. 12. The choir, which is made up of children from around the community will perform songs from around the world. University music Professor Randall Moore will direct. The event is free and open to the public.

Two clowns, Sparky and Mitch, will also perform a series of skits and puppet shows called "Kiddly Jinx" at 1:45 and 3:15 p.m.

The open house will also open two art exhibitions. "Robert Raushenberg: The Stoned Moon Series" is a collection of 29 lithographs on loan from the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art. The second exhibition will be the second in a series of four exploring the work of the late Oregon painter David McCosh. Both exhibits will be on display until Feb. 13.

Guest curator Craig Chesire, a Portland State University professor of art will give a gallery talk on the McCosh exhibit at 2 p.m. Dec. 12.

The Museum of Art is regularly open from noon to 5 p.m. Wednesday to Sunday. It will be closed Dec. 24-26, and Dec. 31-Jan. 2. For more information, call 346-3027.

• Five University authors who have written books on Oregon's natural history will sign copies of their books at the Museum of Natural History Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m.

At 3 p.m. Theodore Stern, University professor emeritus of anthropology, will give a short talk on his book Chiefs and Chief Traders: Indian Relations at Fort Nez Perce, 1818-1855. The book traces the lives of the Fort Nez Perce fur traders and the Middle Columbian Indian tribes.

Other guest authors and features books include: C. Melvin Aikens, University professor of anthropology and author of the new third edition of Archaeology of Oregon; Robert Clark, University president emeritus, author of The Odyssey of Thomas Condon; Thomas Connolly and Dennis Jenkins, archaeologists for the Oregon State Museum of Anthropology, co-authors of Archaeological Investigations at Seaside, Oregon.
