Hockey winless in opening games

By Mark McTyre
For the Oregon Daily Emerald

The Oregon hockey team opened its season this weekend on an unexpected low note when the Ducks lost one game and tied another against visiting Washington.

In the first game of the two game set, the Ducks' offense played the type of game it was expected to play: a fast-paced offense with a lot of scoring opportunities. Oregon tried, but nothing was going in the back of the net.

At the 8:37 mark of the first period, the Huskies took advantage of the opportunities given by Oregon goalie Richard Densmore. Washington's Dave Alter fired a shot at Densmore, who was unable to hold onto the puck, and Huskies forward Marcus Notaro slapped the rebound into the back of the net.

Oregon's offense continued to struggle, missing opportunities for rebound goals and one-timers. Within four minutes of the Huskies' first goal, they scored again at the 4:51 mark to take a 2-0 lead at the end of the first period.

The frustrations of being down 2-0 showed just 24 seconds into the second period, as the Ducks' Steve Melkerson squared off against Washington's Brett Farizzell in a boxing match up against the boards, resulting in game misconduct penalties for both players.

With the flame still burning inside the Ducks, they scored at the 8:30 mark. Freshman standout Greg Schuttenhelm whistled a slap shot off the Huskies goalie, which was then rebounded by Sean Schoppe for the goal.

Trailing only 2-1, it looked as if the Ducks were picking up steam for a comeback charge. Densmore ended the comeback for his own team as he allowed a goal with just one second remaining in the second period.

Oregon did score once more in the game but it wouldn't be enough as Washington held on for a 3-2 victory.

"Our defense had lapses and needed to help out the goalie more," Oregon head coach Paul Rutherford said. "Also, the forwards needed to come back and help. For our first game we gave a solid effort and keyed in on hockey."

In the second game, the Ducks had a new goalie (Tom Bahls) between the pipes as they went right to work on the Huskies.

Mark Adams, who scored the last goal of the first game for Oregon, continued where he left off. At the 11:58 mark of the first period, Adams teamed up with forward Brian Clendenin on a two-on-one situation, and the tandem worked the give and go perfectly with Adams on the scoring end.

With 1:56 left in the first period, the Ducks brought a trio down the ice. Jeff Cintel and Schuttenhelm assisted Schoppe to put the Ducks up 2-0 after one period.

The Huskies came speeding back as they held Oregon to no goals and scored two of their own. The Huskies' first goal shouldn't have counted, as it was an illegal two-line pass, which led to a breakaway goal by Eric Matteau. The second goal was given up at the hands of the goalie when Bahls fell for a fake and Farizzell only had to flip it over Bahls for the goal.

With the score tied 2-2, the Ducks again went wild on the offensive end. Adams scored the best goal of the season so far when he got out into the open and received a pass from Schuttenhelm before faking right and then backhanding the puck to the left. Oregon added its fourth goal when there was mayhem in front of the Huskies net and Melkerson scored.

Just when it seemed the Ducks were going to pick up their first win of the season, the Huskies started to capitalize on the mistakes made by Bahls. Washington scored a power play goal at the 5:53 mark as Bahls went down and couldn't recover in time to get to the puck.

Going into the final minute of the game it seemed Oregon had it won. Then with 10 seconds until victory, Washington received a face-off in the Ducks' zone. The Huskies won the face-off. Notaro passed the puck out to the point where Herb Ahten fired a howitzer past Bahls for the goal.

Normally there would have been an overtime period, but because of other scheduled events at the arena, the game ended in a tie.
