Oregon's Sean Schoppe scores a goal in the Ducks' 5-4 loss to the Oregon Renegades Saturday. MARK McTYRE/For the Emerald

Surprise foe beats Duck hockey

By Mark McTyre
For the Oregon Daily Emerald

Last weekend, the Oregon hockey team continued its winless streak against a surprise opponent.

The Puget Sound hockey team that was supposed to be the Ducks' opponent for the weekend announced that its program had been canceled, and to take their place, the Oregon Renegades, a house league team, stepped in for the two-game set.

The Renegades are comprised of older players with more experience, one of whom played for three years professionally in Europe.

From the start Saturday, the difference in ability showed between the two teams. The Renegades scored after only 47 seconds had passed, on a rebounded shot by Dave Bergstrom. At the 7:22 mark of the first period, the Renegades started on a three-goal scoring streak that took only 1:17. At the end of the first period, the Ducks trailed 4-0.

The Renegades started the second period the same way they started the first. In the first 20 seconds of the period, they had scored again. Tom Bahls, the Oregon goaltender, showed his frustration, as did others, by banging his stick against the ice.

After this fifth goal scored on Bahls, he became a man possessed to not let anything get by him. For the remainder of the game, Bahls allowed no goals in 19 shots fired on him.

The Ducks' offense began to follow Bahls lead as they went on a four-goal streak for the remainder of the game. The leader of the offensive strike for the Ducks was defenseman Dave Tisiot, who scored two goals and had one assist. The other two goals came from Mark Adams and Sean Schoppe.

With four minutes remaining in the game the Ducks were only down by one goal, but they were shutout the rest of the game.

The two teams squared off again the next day and this time in goal for the Ducks was Richard Densmore, who played for the Renegades the day before. The Renegades brought in Dave Jacobs, the Eugene Blues' goaltender, to make sure the Ducks had no chance of a big comeback again.

Densmore continued his unsuccessful goaltending, letting four goals go by as the Ducks fell to the Renegades 4-0.

He's then charged with manslaughter after 10 of his teammates break their backs trying to carry him off the field in celebration.

• As time's running out and the Bills are trailing by 45, that skydiver with the propeller on his back busts through the roof of the Georgia Dome. As he comes crashing into the end-zone, Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly is getting sacked for the Cowboys' fifth safety of the game.

Unfortunately, Kelly's throwing arm gets caught in the propeller. Instead of screaming in pain, Kelly leaps to his feet and starts laughing and celebrating.

"Thank the Lord," he yells into Rashad's microphone as he's walking off the field with his severed arm. "I never have to take a snap for this crappy team of losers again."

It could happen.
