

Another protest

FROM THE PAST: Students protested the University's animal experiments they regarded as cruel and unnecessary during April 1988. Citizens for Animal Rights Eugene organized the demonstration against animal research. Experiments involved surgical research on cats and kittens during which the animals' eyeballs were cut and sewn shut.

Emerald

Ceremony honors employees of EMU

By Catherine Hours
For the Oregon Daily Emerald

About 60 people attended the EMU Employee Recognition Ceremony at the Gerlinger Alumni Lounge Tuesday to honor outstanding EMU employees.

"We have had a long tradition of celebrating the people who most often are not recognized. ...This is an opportunity to thank the hard-working and dedicated people who have given many years to the EMU," EMU Director Dusty Miller said.

The event was the first organized just for employee recognition. Employees had previously been awarded during less formal holiday parties.

EMU Assistant Director Frank Geltner said he hoped this ceremony would initiate a new and enduring tradition.

The EMU personnel consists of about 90 full-time people in services and administration, as well as 350 student employees.

An indispensable campus institution, the EMU is often taken for granted. But many people work hard at the EMU to foster the dynamic community life of the University.

After every five years of service, employees receive pins to mark their contribution to the EMU. Last Tuesday, 18 people were honored in the presence of most of their colleagues.

Gayle Johnson was thanked for 25 years of service at the payroll office. Alan Boslaugh (custody), Tom Urban (Craft Center), Linda Ednoff (Outdoor Program) and Sandy Vaughn (Club Sports) celebrated the twentieth year of dedication to their work.

"When people ask, 'What do these 20 years mean to you?' I answer that when I first came, students could have dated me," Vaughn said. "Now I could be their mother!"

Also honored were Barbara Griffin, Peter Mayer and Alicia Mocassin for 10 years of service. Frank Gosar, Jennie Barela, Jacqueline Gibson, Kathy Cooks, Mary Caspell and Dennis Carr were recognized for five years.

Cooks appreciated having her work recognized. "It's been a long time," she said.

Four other employees nominated by their colleagues were honored for special service.

These recipients were Michael Kraiman (technical services), Barbara Prociw (accounting office), Jim Casby (food service) and Cheryl Jordan (Child Care Center).

Rape charges dismissed

A Lane County Circuit Court judge has dismissed first-degree rape charges against a University graduate physics student.

The student, 32-year-old Young-Tak Chough, was charged Dec. 1, 1993, of raping a female acquaintance Nov. 6 at the Westmoreland family housing complex.

Chough entered a plea of not guilty Dec. 3, and the charge was dismissed "in the interest of justice" Jan. 18. The district attorney in charge of the case was unavailable for comment.
