An exhibit of paintings titled "The World of Mr. Otis Stewart Holbrook's Satirical and Irreverent Brushes with History" is now on display at the University Museum of Art.

The exhibit includes 40 paintings on loan from private and public collections. One of the major lenders to the show is Holbrook's daughter, Sibyl Holbrook. Holbrook, one of the 20th Century's most popular writers on American history and culture, was one of the best known personalities in the Pacific Northwest in his lifetime.

said Lawrence Fong, the museum's registrar and curator of the exhibit.

"Using the name of his fictional painter alter-ego, Mr. Otis Holbrook created witty paintings in several contemporary genres, from the primitive to the surreal," Fong said. "These paintings are comments on popular culture and taste, with particular attention to issues relevant to the Northwest," he said.
