Jaeger was impressed with the behavior of the waiting students.

"The students have been very cooperative," he said. "This is a problem we enjoy having. The immensity of something like this can't be appreciated until you do it."

Crowd Management Services agreed with Jaeger that students were generally well behaved. Aside from a few bonfires that students tried to light to keep warm, the security service said students did not give them too many problems.

"There were easily about 1,000 students who were just partying and not buying tickets," one security guard said.

The informal tailgate party that students threw at the stadium translated into big sales for Domino's Pizza on East 13th Avenue. The pizza establishment reported a profit of $1,649.51 from hungry students Monday night.

At one point, Domino's was selling literally one pizza a minute. From midnight to 12:30 a.m. Monday, Domino's sold 27 pizzas. Altogether, Domino's sold 275 pizzas Sunday night and early Monday morning.
