against Notre Dame in the matchup on Dec. 28.

The Fighting Irish, led by sharp-shooter Ryan Hoover, entered the title game coming off a 72-69 victory over Oregon State the previous night.

Notre Dame controlled the action in the first half with a balanced attack and a tempo more suited for the Fighting Irish squad, leading 36-31 at halftime.

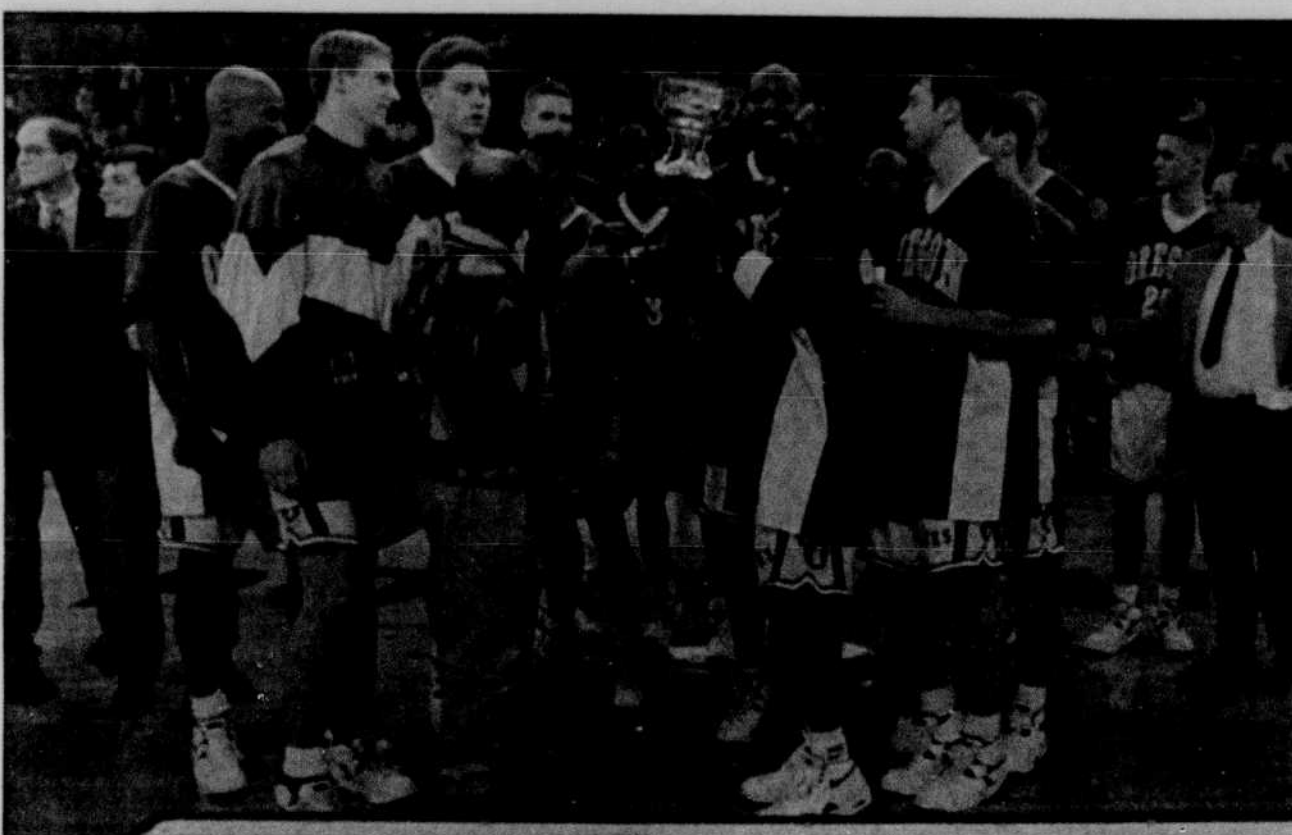

In the second half, the Oregon offense came alive behind the three-point shooting of Jamal Lawrence and the increased presence of Wilkins and Williams. Lawrence would end the night with 18 points on six of eight shooting from beyond the arc. The Ducks would use some clutch free throws in the game's final minutes from Williams and a key steal and conversion by Wilkins to overcome Notre Dame, 73-69.

In probably the biggest disappointment of the tournament, only Williams was named to the Far West Classic All-Tournament team. Kwame Evans from George Washington and Hoover (the Classic MVP) from Notre Dame joined Stephane Brown and Mustafa Hoff from Oregon State, the only team to not win a game in the Classic, to round out the list.

On Dec. 31, Oregon played against Montana, a team that walloped the Ducks in 1991, 78-39.

In a difficult struggle before entering the Pac-10 season, Oregon was able to outlast Montana in the second overtime and escape Mac Court with a 102-97 victory.

The Ducks were led offensively by Wilkins with 22 points and Lawrence with 19. Potter and Johnson kept the boards clean with 10 and seven, respectively.

Oregon won its first Far West Classic Championship since 1974 with victories over Notre Dame and George Washington. GARY GRASS/Emerald
