

Ducks an early test for new coach

Power center Zach Sellers of Oregon soars for a rebound with George Washington's Alexander Koul on his back in the Far West Classic.

With a basketball game against UCLA tonight, that can only mean one thing — USC is soon to follow.

Sure enough, Oregon will take on the 5-5 Trojans on Saturday night at 7:05 in McArthur Court.

Oregon will face a Trojan team led by interim head coach Charlie Parker, who took over after the sudden retirement of USC head coach George Raveling.

Raveling made his decision to retire just a few weeks prior to this season, following a car accident in which he was badly injured. Raveling felt that it was in the best interests of himself and the USC program to step down since he would not be physically capable of coaching to the degree he would like.

The Ducks will be looking to halt a seven-game losing streak with USC, whose balanced attack includes six players averaging in double figures.

The Trojans are led by forwards Lorenzo Orr and Jaha Wilson. Orr leads the team with a 16.4 scoring average, while Wilson adds a team-high 10.7 rebounds per game to go along with his 13.1 point average.

USC's second-leading scorer, Stais Boseman, comes off the bench to pitch in his 13.5 per game. Cameron Murray, the Trojans' explosive shooting guard, is the younger brother of former UCLA standout — and current Portland Trail Blazer — Tracy Murray. Before the younger Murray signed with USC, there was some speculation that the potential-star had been considering playing for the Ducks.

Oregon trails this rivalry, 47-24, although the Ducks had won nine straight contests prior to the current losing skid.

Orlando Williams will be looking to jump to No. 6 on the Ducks' all-time scoring list, trailing Jim Barnett by just 37 points prior to tonight's UCLA game. He is also just 17 field goals away from No. 9 Terrell Brandon. Williams already owns the one-season and career three-point marks.

Nine Oregon players are averaging at least 14 minutes per game and the Ducks have a +15 assist-turnover ratio while limiting their opponents to a -26 margin. Oregon is averaging 86.3 points per game while only giving up 75.2.
