

Injury sidelines Suns' star for season

PHOENIX (AP) — Danny Manning tore a knee ligament during practice Monday and the Phoenix Suns star will miss the rest of the season.

Manning fell during the morning workout and had to be carried from the court. Team doctor Richard Emerson said the 6-foot-10 forward tore the anterior cruciate ligament of his left knee.

He is to undergo surgery at an unspecified date. Such an injury can sideline a player for a year.

"It certainly gives us a big hole to fill," said coach Paul Westphal, whose team has been hit by injuries. "You really can't replace a guy like that, but we'll do the best we can."

Manning's rookie season with the Los Angeles Clippers was cut short at 26 games when he injured the anterior cruciate ligament of his right knee on Jan. 4, 1989.

Manning had played in all 46 games this season, his first with the Suns after leaving the Atlanta Hawks. A former No. 1 draft pick (1988) and two-time All-Star, Manning passed up his chance to command an estimated $5 million per year as a free agent and signed a one-year contract with the Suns for $1 million during the off-season.

He started 19 games this season, including two at center and the last four in a row, averaging 23 points and 8.8 rebounds in those contests. Earlier, Westphal liked Manning coming off the bench.

His shooting improved throughout the season, markedly in the last 16 games, when he hit 57 percent of his shots. For the season, Manning ranked 10th in the NBA at 55 percent.

Westphal said he hadn't decided on an alternate lineup. Danny Schayes, Charles Barkley, Dan Majerle and Elliot Perry started the last two games with Manning, but Wayman Tisdale was in the post the first two.

Tisdale separated rib cartilage Wednesday night against the Los Angeles Lakers and has missed the last two games. To compound the Suns' problems, he aggravated the injury again early Tuesday when he sneezed while at his wife's bedside as she gave birth Monday to their fourth child.

"(Trainer) Joe Proski said that's the worst thing you can do is sneeze," said Tisdale, who will be out at least through the All-Star break.

A.C. Green, one potential replacement for Manning, said he was ready if Westphal decides to increase his playing time.

"I condition my body to play 48 minutes every game, so condition is never a question or a problem with me," Green said.

skates in the professional baseball world.

While I don't have any qualms about them making that much money, I do have qualms about them complaining about how much they make.

And besides, it is just baseball. I love baseball, but come on, these guys get paid to play a game. Yes, I know you hear this a lot, but it starts to jump out at you when the person in charge of this country — who, incidentally, makes roughly seven times less than the average player salary — jumps at the chance to help get these "players" back to "playing" their "game."

The squabbling between the two sides wouldn't even be enough to get me — a die-hard baseball fan through and through — involved in the strike, and I really don't have that much to do. Now, I would have hoped our president would have something better to do than get some overpaid athletes to kiss and makeup with their stingy bosses. But obviously he does not.
