provide a solid backbone for her demands.

And what about Title IX? Does anyone truly understand the comings and goings of such a venture?

Title IX is supposed to ensure gender equity among collegiate athletics. What it truly provides is a headache for athletic departments and athletes in general. The final solution typically boils down to either cutting men's programs or the unheard of addition of women's programs.

I agree with its intention, but I'd like to see an athletic department look for the positive. Add more women's programs. Work harder to maintain efficiency within budgets. Put in that extra hour searching for more donations.

It shouldn't be a men vs. women decision. Opportunities should be available for many athletes. Oregon is successfully within the boundaries of Title IX, but at what cost? Instead of trimming the fat, add a women's gymnastics or soccer team. Let's look at fielding a men's baseball program as well. We are in the Pac-10, right?

Branch out and give Oregon more to be proud of.

that, that is exactly what you want. You want your team to still be productive."

"They are doing a great job out here, and if they don't win the job, they will be very, very capable backups to whoever is going to be the number one guy," Graziani said.

"I think the coaches and players have taken this transition well and we are ready to move on and defend the title," he said.

ART WORKSHOPS
Introduction to Weaving
Choose a small project to learn the fundamentals of weaving. Students will weave tabby and twill weave structures on a table loom, with emphasis on color combinations. Wed, Apr 12-May 17 6:00-8:30pm
Pat Sparks, Feltmaker
Feltmaking Basic Concepts
This is a one-day workshop for people who have never before or want more control in their felting. Learn why wool felts, how to test fleece to see if it will felt, and controlled sampling methods for various types of fleece. Samples can be compiled into a notebook for reference. Since fleece type influences the handling properties of felt fabric, our goal in this class is to help the felter choose the correct fleece for a desired project. The samples will expand the possibilities for future felting.
