"The allocation of student incidental fees concerns the EMU, the student groups and programs and the Athletic Department. These all have growing importance on our campus due to the increase in incidental fees and the growing population. The funds must be managed in a competent way which makes the most out of the fees we as students must pay.

The recent success of the two largest sports programs on our campus has brought with it financial rewards to the UO Athletic Department, an increase in student interest and national recognition in football and basketball. The University and the Athletic Department need to take advantage of this and continue to build and strengthen the athletic programs at the University of Oregon.

If elected to the Student Senate, I will work with the Finance Senators to allocate funds fairly to the various groups and programs on campus. A seat on the finance committee in the Student Senate would allow me to use my skills and knowledge to allocate the student funds in the best interest of the students, along with helping to continue the success achieved on the Athletic level this past year. Vote Jeff Miller for Student Senate."

From Rags to Roses-What role have you played in the recent success of Oregon athletics? You may not have journeyed to Pasadena to enjoy the spectacle of the Rose Bowl or mobbed the floor at MacCourt when the Ducks overwhelmed UCLA for the second consecutive time, but you DID contribute to the athletic program when you paid your incidental fees. As our athletic program continues to evolve and capture national attention, we need to evaluate both the benefits and the costs of contributing our incidental fees to the promotion of Oregon athletics.

With a background in both the study and reality of the business world, and with my finger on the pulse of college athletics, I feel I am qualified to help the University community weigh our options and proceed with determination when implementing our decision.

As students of the University of Oregon, we are assessed a significant portion of money for incidental fees. Funds are distributed to various ASUO funded and subsidized programs, the EMU and the Athletic Department. As enrollment to the U of O will increase next year, so will the fee revenues. With this increase in fee revenues, skill and knowledge of the incidental fee allocation process is essential.

Also I feel it is important for each student to have access to Athletic event tickets without any extra costs. "Free" athletic tickets are of interest to both current students of the University of Oregon and to prospective students. Keeping athletic tickets free of charge and the Athletic Department funded in full, without an increase in student fees, is still possible if the fees are clearly evaluated. As a prominent student group leader on campus, I am familiar with the student group leader on campus, I am familiar with the student fee process and have knowledge and experience in this area.

If elected to the Student Senate, I would negotiate with each Finance Committee in order to reach the fairest possible compromise regarding the distribution of student fees to both student programs and the Athletic Department. Vote for Rachel Nicholson, Seat #7

We as students must take advantage of our rights to be involved with the process of allocating incidental fees. There are too many instances when a small group of students with one set of ideas, makes the decisions for the majority. The only way this can be solved is obvious-more involvement from the students, not only in voting, but also with representation. This is why I am running for this position. The Athletic Finance Committee has the responsibility to develop a recommendation for it's allocation of Incidental Fees. In order for the committee to do a just job, it must be composed of students who are willing to make decisions that reflect the changing times. Everyone realized the recent success of our tremendous athletic program, but how far should those feelings of support be taken? This question must be answered by someone who can make fair, unbiased decisions about the future of the department. If I am elected to this committee, I will support the Athletic Department completely, but more importantly, I will be making decisions that depict the vies and concerns of our student body.

Students here at the University of Oregon pay a lot of money in incidental fees throughout the year. Each year questions are raised as to the validity of ASUO Finance committee decisions. If elected an Athletic Department Finance Senator, I will strive to ensure that funds are spent in an effective and appropriate manner. The main focus in my agenda is to provide for events that encourage safe and enjoyable campus participation. Vote for Chip Messenger.

The university exists because of the students. Therefore, the representations of students in the faculty-student University Senate, Committees and University Assembly to set general university policies are crucial. I would like to represent students' voices: the majority as well as the minority students.

Besides being the representative in the academic administration, the members of the Athletic Department Finance Committee will make recommendation on how to budget the Athletic Department. I have always love sports all my life, and I do believe that intercollegiate athletics are important. Nonetheless, students are not fully informed on what the Athletic Department does with our one million student incidental fee and with the other millions of dollars from donors. One of my goals is to get the information out so we can all understand how the Athletic Department works, and to use the information to make better decisions on how we want to fund the Athletic Department.

I am a Junior majoring in Finance/Marketing and Journalism. I have experiences in community services, student government and cultural organizations. I am willing to work hard to make rational decisions and to have student's voices be heard and be represented.

The ASUO Athletic Department Finance Committee arranges fund allocations for the Athletic Department. My concern for the department has led me to declare candidacy for the position of Athletic Committee Finance Senator.

Over two terms at U of O I have accumulated an index of 3.34 and I pledge to continue my hard work for the benefit of the University's athletic programs. I have an ethical approach to working and will continue to make morally correct decisions if elected.

As a letterman in three varsity sports, and Co-Captain of the Varsity Basketball team in high school, I believe in success on and off the court. An athletic background will enable me to make experienced decisions for our athletic program's welfare.

I plan to make student tickets more accessible, as well as develop school spirit and unity by contributing to developing athletic programs. If elected I will negotiate from a knowledgeable and impartial standpoint. Vote for Alexander Wolin.

Senate Seat #9, two-year term

• Ramiro Flores

Over the past three years here at the University I have had the opportunity to see many productive and insightful ways of trying to put forth excellent ideas. By that same token I've also seen what does not work. As a candidate for the Athletic department senate seat I believe that I am an excellent candidate for the position. My involvement with different organizations on campus from MEChA, MCC, CME and also as a student who cares where student fees go, your vote for me is a wise one. The athletic department receives over $1 million in your money! My commitment to represent the students fairly in budget allocations and contracts with the athletic department is a sincere one. My perspective is not only one of a Chicano student but one that equitably represents the whole student body. My contact and familiarity with many organizations throughout campus and the community have helped to broaden my perspectives and understand issues that effect our community. Please—Vote Progressive—RAMIRO FLORES A.D SEAT 9!

When I started working on the Student Senate last year, I was just some big loser guy who didn't know what was going on, or how to do anything.

Now that it has been a year, I do know what's happening, and I do know how to get stuff done, and, well I'm still a big loser but I've got experience. So if you happen to be voting, and if you happen to see my name, Kent J. Black, on the ballot then just live life on the edge, and vote for me. Again.

• Melissa Beaty

As an undeclared freshman, I have often felt a lack of power and direction when it came to my place in the University and where I am headed. This is why I became involved in student government. I wanted to better understand the way the University is governed, what my place is in the University, and how I could influence the University's policies. Winter term I interned with the ASUO Programs Coordinator. This position gave me insight into how our student government is run. (In addition, I realized the importance of student-funded programs which contribute to the activity and diversity which define our campus community.) Over the past term, I have learned that my involvement does make a difference and I want to continue that involvement. I would like to represent undeclared majors (the University's largest academic constituency) in the Senate in order to voice the concerns of myself and students like me. My interest in this position is definitely self-motivated: I want to affect the University in a way that will benefit me, as well as all students (undeclared or otherwise).

In order for students to have a sense of involvement, it's vital we have place on campus. As an Academic senator I pledge to work for student empowerment. I feel it's necessary to make students aware of the political decision that effect student issues. I feel it's important to create a comfortable forum for students to express their concerns and solutions.

Much of my involvement at the University of Oregon has been organizing and educating students around environmental and social issues with
