how Oregon scores in the tournament.

"[The Landfall Club course] will differentiate the teams from who's playing well and who's not because you can't make a lot of mistakes on the course," Tennant said. "That should help us because we seem to play better under adverse conditions."

Because of Oregon's experience level, the team is able to take such adverse conditions and turn them into a positive situation, she said.

The Duck golfers are led by seniors Shannon Hare and Karly Mills, but have used a consistent supporting cast of senior Leigh Casey and juniors Christel Tomori and Susie Roh to keep them in contention.

"[Shannon and Karly] have come on real strong at the end of the year," Tennant said. "Shannon has been very consistent throughout the whole year but her scores are getting lower as the year progresses. Karly has really found her game and turned in some good scores and really helped the team a lot."
