

Play tackles women's issues

By Andrew Mayer
Freelance Reporter

Thirty different authors collaborated to write the all-female musical revue A ... My Name is Alice.

The latest installment of the University of Oregon's Mad Duck Theatre opens at 8 p.m. tonight in the Arena Theatre of Villard Hall. The play is directed by doctoral candidate Michael Phillips.

Phillips said the play is "A vaudeville, cabaret-type play where each scene has different characters and no static, central character."

The cast of A ... My Name is Alice consists of community members and students Teresa Findorff-Johnson, Sandy Loew and Valerie Herkert, Patricia Meade and Rene Ragan.

The music selection is composed of jazz, blues, 1960s rock 'n' roll and vaudeville numbers. Audiences can expect the play to lightly touch on women's issues and be of a nature both genders will appreciate.

Phillips said of the play, "It's not a male-basher." Moreover, he said some of the cast play men's roles as well.
