region, Durham said. About half of the torchbearers will be selected by United Way organizations around the county, and 2,500 will be chosen by The Coca-Cola Co. The others will be former Olympians and others selected by the Olympics organization. Ten thousand torchbearers from around the world will make the 15,000-mile journey.

United Way of Lane County will help recruit the hundreds of volunteers needed to help surround the Olympic Flame's arrival, Durham said.

"We are pleased to be involved in the most dramatic event leading up to the Olympic Games," said Kate Kloos, volunteer marketing chairwoman for United Way of Lane County.

The 1996 Olympic Torch Relay, the largest in the history of the Olympic Games, starts on April 27 in Los Angeles and ends in Atlanta 84 days later, on July 19, the day of the Opening Ceremony for the Games of the XXVth Olympiad.

additional 10 percent (for residents) or 14 percent (for non-residents).

The increase in tuition is the culmination of a process that began in spring of 1994, said Dave Quenzer, budget director for the Oregon State Board of Higher Education.

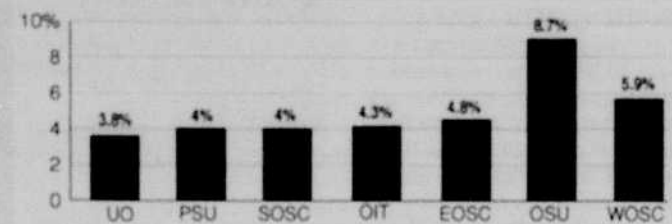

It is also a reflection of the effects of 1990's property tax-limiting Measure 5, Quenzer said.

"Because of the effects of Measure 5, the board felt that we would need to increase [resident] tuition by 9 percent," Quenzer said. However, Gov. Kitzhaber's proposed budget, adopted by the state Legislature, managed to lessen the proposed increase to only 4 percent, Quenzer said.

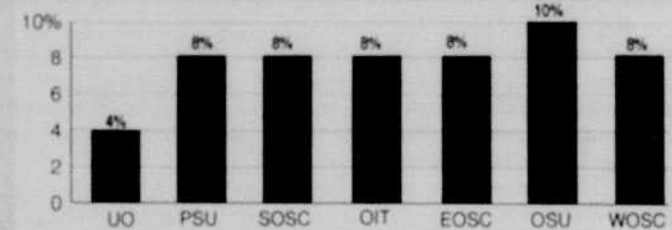

Resident undergraduate students at all Oregon institutions will see roughly a 4 percent increase in base instruction fees, while non-residents will pay from 4 to 10 percent more than last year, depending on the institution.

Ryan Harmon, a senior majoring in psychology, said he knew tuition was going to increase and was not surprised.

"Every year it's the same thing," Harmon said. "I pay for everything, so I guess I'll beg and plead for more financial aid."

The forecasted enrollment for the 1995-96 school year so far is between 16,900 and 17,000 students, said James Buch, University director of admissions.

two main recipients of federal monies.

But the gag rule may still be a threat to student advocates, because it is uncertain whether Istook will try to reintroduce the amendment in the House sometime this week.

"It was a victory for the rights of students to have a say in the political process," said Jennifer Williamson, ASUO president, in a news release. "However, I am afraid that the people who want to silence students will bring it to the House floor [this] week."

But Kelton believes it is very unlikely Istook will introduce the amendment a third time.

The amendment to the House Labor, Health, Human Services and Education appropriations bill was first defeated on July 11 during the subcommittee markup.

The gag rule was overwhelmingly opposed by the education and public interest community.

Organizations including the Oregon Student Public Interest Research Group, the Oregon Student Lobby, the Association of American Universities, the American Council on Education, the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities and the American Association of University Professors all took action when they learned that Istook intended to reintroduce the amendment to the House Appropriations Committee on July 20.

"The amendment is an affront to the rights of students to participate in the political process," said a July 17 letter from the United States Student Association to the House of Representatives.

"These attacks on students' rights and university fee autonomy have been taking place on the state level across the country," the letter said. "If these restrictive federal and state measures are enacted, successful state student associations who work on issues of access would find it impossible to continue their work."

Lee Novak, a member of OSPIRG's state board of directors, said the amendment would have forced the University to change the incidental fee process.

"The way [the amendment] was written," he said, "it would have defeated every student group."

Kelton said the ASUO hopes to increase lobbying during the 1995-96 school year by combining the efforts of all student organizations. "The amendment would definitely have affected the ability to see this agenda through," he said. "It would have affected the quality of life on campus."

But Kelton remains hopeful that the amendment will not be reintroduced.

"This amendment was defeated — the attempt to silence students was defeated," Kelton said. "There is not much possibility that it will be reintroduced again."

great research...

Kaplan spends over $3 million annually developing products and researching the tests. We've proved that we know the tests inside out.

LSAT

In 1992, Kaplan predicted the elimination of an LSAT question type and changed our course in anticipation of the change.

GRE

In 1993, the ETS was forced to withdraw a GRE question type because Kaplan "broke the code."

GMAT

In 1994, Kaplan research brought to light security flaws in the computer-based GRE tests. As a result, the ETS temporarily pulled the test.

MCAT

DAT
