ASUO special request granted by Senate

■ DECISION: Student Senate agrees to Family Center's $400 request to cover unpaid bill

The Student Senate approved an ASUO special request for more than $400 to pay a Family Center bill Wednesday night.

The Family Center, an ASUO program that was zero-funded last year, owed the money to the Faculty Club for a dinner held there in the fall of 1993.

But the Faculty Club failed to bill the Family Center for the dinner prior to the Center's dissolution, and a portion of the dinner bill has gone unpaid until now.

ASUO vice president Zachary Kelton said he became aware of the bill after the ASUO executive coordinator brought it to his attention.

"The bill for the Faculty Club was not charged to the Family Center until after the account had gone into surplus," Kelton said.

At the end of each fiscal year, money not used by student programs goes into a surplus account used to fund special requests. When the Family Center was dissolved, more than $12,000 was deposited into the surplus account.

The Student Senate debated about whether or not to pay the bill with special request money because the bill was for a dinner, and food items cannot be paid for with student fees.

Kelton said the Family Center was funded through a ballot measure and students who passed the measure were aware of the program's intent to sponsor cultural events, including refreshments.

Senate president Martin Fisher said ballot measures need to be regarded equally to other forms of student fee allocation. "The rule says no fees to be paid on food, it doesn't say except for ballot measures," he said.

Fisher proposed the ASUO pay the bill with money from its fund-raising account so student fees would not be improperly used.

Kelton said if the fund-raising account were used to pay the bill students would be affected. He said ASUO fund-raising money goes to co-sponsor student events and pay for trips to lobby for students.

"The money serves the students, it doesn't serve the Executive," Kelton said. He said the Senate could vote to suspend its rules in order to pass the special request.

After an hour of debate, the Senate voted to suspend its rules and approved a special request of $426 to pay the Faculty Club for the Family Center dinner.

Sen. Michelle Summers-Thompson said the Senate approved the request so students and the ASUO would not be punished for one group's lack of responsibility.
