

"This is a huge short book. Better than anyone but Ken Kesey, Robert Heilman writes how woods and streams shape a working people. He just nails it."
—Robin Cody, author of Ricochet River

A Reading & Booksigning with Robert Heilman

author of Overstory: Zero, Real Life in Timber Country

Wednesday, October 25th

7:30 p.m. in the UO Knight Library Browsing Room

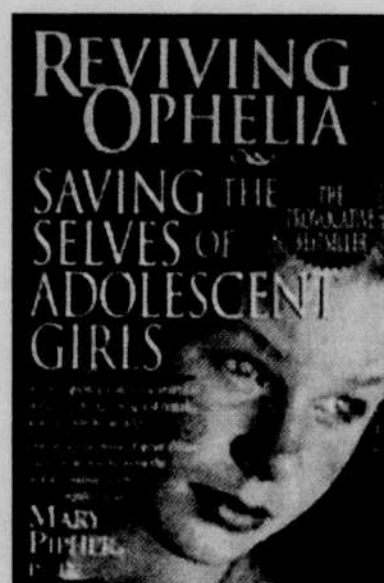

Cosponsored by the Knight Library

Overstory: Zero, the first book of Myrtle Creek author Robert Leo Heilman, reveals the hard life of the working class: loggers, miners, roofers, mill workers, and tree planters. He tells the truth, not afraid to address both brutality and controversy, especially concerning old-growth forest management. Heilman gives us rare insight into the threatened timber communities of the Pacific Northwest. Hardcover $21.95 upstairs and at the event.
