Ducks prepare for all out Civil War

PREVIEW: Oregon and Oregon State square off for the 99th time

By Andrea DeYoung
Sports Reporter

There are two words that can excite Duck fans to a point of frenzy, and it is time to say them again — Civil War. For the 99th time in history, the Ducks and Beavers will face off Saturday in the ultimate duel for state-wide respect.

For Oregon, the game also signifies a stepping stone in its journey to a bowl game. The Ducks 8-2 overall record plus a whipping of the Beavers will keep Oregon in the hunt for a Jan. 1 bowl game.

The Beavers have suffered this season, as they have been unable to win a game in the Pacific-10 Conference and have recorded an overall record of 1-9. But they cannot be counted out considering they are ranked 14th in the nation in total defense. Oregon head coach Mike Bellotti gives the defensive team credit.

"They play with great pride and great intensity on defense," Bellotti said. "They never give up and play hard the entire game. I'm very impressed with them, and very concerned with their ability to read field positions of the defense and create problems for you. I think you have to be patient when you play Oregon State because at times their blitzing and dogging is going to hit you in the mouth and other times, it's going to get you the opportunity for a big play."

For the Beavers, free safety Reggie Tongue is the defensive anchor. He has three pass interceptions returned for touchdowns this season and is a finalist for the Jim Thorpe award, given to the nation's top defensive back. Oregon cornerback Alex Molden is also still in the running for the award.

On offense, Oregon State will most likely throw a combination of two quarterbacks at the Ducks. Redshirt freshman Tim Alexander is considered by Bellotti to be the quick quarterback and is passing better than Rahim Muhammad, but considering the Beavers have one passing touchdown all year, that may not be vital for
