

Season's Greetings

The Perfect Tree

From the largest and most recognized tree at Rockefeller Center in New York City to the smaller, sparsely decorated one found in many dorm rooms, evergreens will once again brighten the lives and raise the hopes of many during the upcoming holiday season.

Looking for something more than what is offered by the dime-a-dozen tree lots that clutter the back corners of parking lots after Thanksgiving, many people choose to visit tree farms instead.

Year after year, hundreds of families and people young and old alike trek to the Montgomery Tree Farm in search for the perfect holiday evergreen.

Located 17 miles out of Eugene and one mile west of Noti on

Turn to TREE, Page 16B

*Story by Simon Ross
Photos by Natalie Montgomery*