■ HOCKEY: Players hope winning streak continues at away games

For the second time this season the Oregon hockey team will load the bus and head north for a two-game series. On Jan. 13 and 14 the Ducks will face off against Western Washington in Bellingham for its first game after winter break.

"This year we are expecting to win two games up there," team member Seth Prouser said. "Last year we went up there and tied them twice."

"I don't know how many guys will make the trip up; we may be shorthanded," Malia said.

Taking control of the game physically will be a key for the Ducks.

"Usually if we can take control early everything else falls into place," team member Robert Wasson said. "We want to keep up the same kind of team chemistry that we had in the last series we played before winter break."

During dead week of fall term the Ducks played back-to-back home games against Walla Walla College and when the weekend was over, the scores resembled those of a football game.

In the first game of the series on Dec. 2, Oregon scored two touchdowns and missed one extra point to end the game with a 13-4 win.

The following day the Ducks took it to Walla Walla once again with a 6-2 win. Flint Doughtchak lead the way for the Ducks with three goals and five assists in the two games. Goaltenders Keith Barbato and Mike Marsh both turned in stellar performances, Prouser said.

"We took control early and never let go," Wasson said.

Dynamite passing, good goal-tending and physical play lead to the embarrassment the Ducks dolled out, team member Chris Geib said.

Oregon's next home series will be on Jan. 19 and 20 when it will host Pacific-8 Hockey Conference powerhouse California at 8:30 at Lane County Ice rink.

In other club sports news this weekend, men's volleyball goes on the road to Forest Grove, Oregon. Meanwhile, the snowboard club hits the slopes of Mount Bachelor to practice for upcoming meets.

son had not scored a basket this season but was forced into the starting line-up against Oregon.

Although Jackson scored only two points, Eastman was pleased with what he saw.

"Kareem did a good job," Eastman said. "Especially for how little he's played."

Jackson, though, was not too happy with the way he played.

"I think the effort was there," Jackson said, "but I think I could have cut down on some of the turnovers. We've got a game on Saturday, and I've got to come out, take care of the ball, and take care of the team."

Washington State will have another chance to get its first conference win of the season on Saturday when it faces Oregon State.
