Tennessee stomps Georgia for title

■ WOMEN'S BASKETBALL:

Georgia's star guard was held to just eight points in the Lady Vols' 83-65 win

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Tennessee felt it had to play a perfect game to beat Georgia. The Lady Vols went out and did just that.

Using its size and strength to offset Georgia's quickness, Tennessee won 83-65 Sunday night to capture its fourth NCAA championship.

The Lady Vols did it by out-rebounding Georgia. They did it by getting the ball inside. And they did with outstanding defense from Latina Davis against Georgia's All-America guard, Saudia Roundtree.

Those were exactly the elements that coach Pat Summitt sought against a team she called the most explosive in women's basketball.

"This basketball team could not have responded any better to our game plan," said Summitt, who has guided Tennessee to all of its NCAA titles. "They tried their hardest to do everything we told them to do."

One of those items was to keep Roundtree under control by stopping her from driving. That fell to Davis, who was playing her last game for Tennessee, and she responded against a player known for beating opponents with quick shots off the dribble or fancy spin moves to the basket.

Roundtree was unable to get Georgia into its deadly transition game and finished with just eight points — none in the second half — on 3-for-14 shooting.

"After watching the scouting films, they told me to stay on her left side and take that away from her," said Davis, who also contributed eight points, eight assists and four steals. "That's what I tried to do."

Freshman Chamique Hold-sclaw led Tennessee (32-4) with 16 points and 14 rebounds. Tiffani Johnson also scored 16 for the Lady Vols and Abby Conklin added 14, including four three-pointers. Pashen Thompson had 12 points and 11 rebounds.

The victory, Tennessee's 15th straight, avenged a 77-71 loss at Georgia back in January. The Lady Vols outrebounded Georgia 63-30 in that game and had another big edge on the boards Sunday night, this time 54-39.

La'Keshia Frett led Georgia (28-5) with 25 points but had only seven in the second half. Tracy Henderson scored 16 for the Lady Bulldogs, who shot 27 percent in the second half and 38 percent for the game.

Wildcats look to solve Syracuse zone

■ MEN'S BASKETBALL: The Orangemen's defense is the tournament's hot topic

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Pitino likes to preach to his Kentucky basketball team about living in the "precious present." No looking ahead or back. Just worry about today.

Well, almost no looking back.

When Kentucky faces Syracuse in the NCAA championship game Monday night as a 14-point favorite, its toughest job will be solving the Orangemen's 2-3 zone. The zone has been a much-discussed topic among the Wildcats ever since it was used by North Carolina to beat them in last year's Southeast Regional final.

"The North Carolina loss is the only thing we look back on from the past," Kentucky point guard Anthony Epps said Sunday. "We go against that zone every day in practice."

After a season in which it didn't really seem to matter what defense was used against them, the Wildcats (33-2) will finally get to go against the zone in a game. They won by an average of 23 points this season, and Saturday night's 81-74 semifinal victory over top-ranked Massachusetts was their first NCAA tournament win by fewer than 20 points.

Still, last season's 74-61 loss to North Carolina one step from the Final Four has been a tough one to forget. The Wildcats shot just 28 percent and were 7-of-36 from three-point range.

"After last year when we played North Carolina, we have played against a 2-3 zone for anywhere from 15 to 30 minutes every day," Pitino said. "We've been good at attacking it and we have to be, because Syracuse plays the best 2-3 zone in the country."

Syracuse (29-8), which reached the title game with a 77-69 victory over Mississippi State, has won praise — not ridicule — for the zone, especially during its improbable NCAA tournament run. The defense received the credit for the regional final win over Kansas when the Jayhawks became the fourth straight team to shoot under 39 percent and were 4-for-25 from beyond the arc.

The zone was shaping up to be the wrong way to go early in Saturday night's game when Mississippi State hit three three-pointers in as many attempts in the opening four minutes. But the rest of the way, the Orangemen's zone forced the Bulldogs into turnovers and negated their inside game.

Kentucky doesn't want to make the same mistake.

"You have to keep attacking the zone," Pitino said. "You can't rely on fool's gold if you make
