Greek performances sing with variety

By Ashley Bach

Michael Jackson, Jon Bon Jovi, John Travolta and the Bee Gees were all there. So were about 300 fraternity and sorority members, wearing unusual costumes and singing and dancing together.

And while this may seem like the biggest greek weekend party ever, it was actually the Greek Sing and Variety Show, an annual talent competition that goes back more than 10 years. This year's event was in the EMU Ballroom on Wednesday night.

Eight fraternity/sorority teams danced and sang to songs like "Thriller," "Shot Through The Heart," and "YMCA" while 10 other acts participated in the variety portion of the event.

First place awards were given to Kappa Alpha Theta and Sigma Phi Epsilon in the team event and a tie between Sigma Nu and Gamma Phi Beta in the variety show.

For the men and women teams, performing a five-minute segment involved weeks of practice.

During the Greek Sing and Variety Show, members of Alpha Chi Omega and Phi Kappa Psi perform to the song "Grease" in the EMU Ballroom on Wednesday evening for a crowd of about 300 students.

Gleason, who performed "Glamour Rock" with Gamma Phi Beta, said both houses were working on the dance for four weeks.

"It's just a matter of if we execute it right," he said before the event.

Many sororities had trouble getting men to participate in the dances, which the women choreographed. However, the men who were involved did a good job, they said.

"The guys that came were very cooperative and excited," Tri-Delta member Heather Davis said.

And while the event was ultimately a competition, most of the participants seemed more concerned with other things.

"We don't really care [how we did]," said Trent Kauffman from Delta Tau Delta. "It's over and we're here to have fun."
