

School gives columnist a slice of life

Four years ago I showed up at this institution not knowin' jack. Now I'm graduating, and I still don't know jack, but I've learned a bit. Over the past four years I formed incredible friendships, did things I never expected, learned to appreciate the finer things in life (i.e. beer), fell in love, had my heart broken and, from it, felt pain I never knew was possible. Overall, this little slice o' academia has been quite the learning experience for this particular yahoo.

While I've been at this fine institution of higher learning, I've had the pleasure of being involved at the campus' only student-owned, student-run radio station, KWVA, 88.1 FM. I've been a DJ and the Chair of the KWVA Board of Directors. I've had the interesting privilege of being a Student Senator my sophomore year. (No, they don't do anything important.) I ran on a platform to fumigate the EMU with nitrous oxide and won. Finally somebody made the mistake of hiring me to spew onto a page, have it printed and actually get paid for it.

First off, I'd like to thank Dr. Catherine Page for letting me play in that garden of knowledge others would call a laboratory. Thank you for giving me a chance and not killing me when $450 worth of cobalt went all over the place. I've learned more in your lab than in any class.

Thanks to the professors who, for lack of a better term, rocked my world. Dr. Koch; mathematics, Dr. Stevens & Dr. Long; chemistry, and Dr. Falco; English. Nothing gets a student more excited to learn more than when the professor is visibly excited about the subject himself. And to Dr. Haley, for always putting an obnoxious undergrad in his place, right in front of a brand-spankin' new $700,000 NMR.

Then I went and fell in love. When I least expected it — it smacked me upside the head. Of course when it ends your heart falls out, salt's ground into it, and then someone's kind enough to shove it back in (thank you Patrick, you Irish bastard). Painful, yes. A growing experience — an extremely necessary one. My dear Heather, I thank you for both being my first love and for sharing the pain that followed.

To the staff at KWVA: my eternal thanks and gratitude for turning the station into what it is today. To KWVA General Manager J. Pierson, thank you for nurturing the station and the staff into the incredible things that they've become, for letting me have it when I needed it and for teaching me a great deal about everything without ever knowing it.

OPINION

Thanks to UO Catering for feeding me and to Paul for teaching me the fine art of tending bar when I was a wee bit too young.

Finally to those who have always stuck by me through all the crap. Yan; you are the coolest, Patrick; you are by far the smartest, and there is only one David R.J. Unger ladies and gentlemen, accept no substitutes.

Michael who taught me to dance, Debbie who let me feel joy again, Kate who made me masculine with her lipstick and eyeliner.

Jim and Uncle Jeffy who taught me to drink with mirth and laughed when I puked up my liver. Margret, men do suck, thanks for living with me for a year. Craig, Bausch, and Roger, you gave me one of the greatest summers one could ask for. Sean and Dave, the coolest editors I could've asked for.

Finally to my parents, brother and sister for making me who I am today.

I learned more than I'll ever use or understand about quantum mechanics and thermodynamics, but gathered a wealth of knowledge by meeting and befriending these people. They taught me more than I ever thought possible. And I still have much to learn. I wish all of you the best of luck and the happiest of lives. After all, love and happiness are the only things worth living for, and if you do live well and live life to the fullest you will find them. Thank you for lending me your ear. Good Night.

Lies unacceptable

I don't mind it when others are critical of the issues I believe in. In fact, I expected disagreement during my recent campaign for Eugene City Council.

In the past two weeks, some individuals have made unsubstantiated, unwarranted and outrageous accusations against me. These individuals distributed slandorous fliers prior to the May 21 election causing public confusion over the removal of the fliers from ASUO mailboxes.

Making the matter worse, the Emerald failed to mention that the individuals who distributed the fliers were the same ones who claimed to have witnessed me removing the negative fliers.

ASUO President Jen

Williamson exercised her authority to remove the fliers, which she later stated publicly.

People will agree or disagree on a variety of topics, but to lie or distribute slanderous material is simply unacceptable.
