the future. For now, firefighters are on 24-hour shifts, with three in the station at a time. They serve the University area, but also respond to larger fires throughout Eugene that require more than one engine to fight.

The cost of the reconstruction should end up being around $475,000, with the money coming from the City of Eugene's general fund.

Kittredge Evans believes that the ordinance to ban dogs on Thirteenth street is wrong.

What do you think of the proposed ordinance that would ban dogs and skateboarders from Thirteenth Avenue?

"I'm not against the ban. But I doubt it would affect my business. This is such a specialized service, I don't think dogs and skateboards drive people to VRC."

— Jerry Martin,
owner of Campus
Shoe Stop

"I hate rules and I hate laws that limit things like that. But it's true — this block has not only become an annoyance, but I'm also afraid for some of my female friends."

— Andy Packard, student

"I don't think it would really affect the business. I think people who come down here on 13th are pretty used to everything. Dogs and skateboarders are normal here. ... [They] haven't gotten in our way."

— Koki Wilson,
clerk West Moon
Trading Company

"Eugene is a nice, small town, and this kind of ban just doesn't seem fair. The kids aren't going to leave if you tell them they can't have dogs. Or they'll just migrate to some other place and the same thing will happen."

— Erin Gillilan,
from Pennsylvania

"It's not right. I live in a house, I'm not homeless. I'm just outside waiting for my girlfriend and I wanted to bring my dog along."

Ban: City trying to attract long- term residents

connected to the area."

The result is a falling down of landscaping and other residential maintenance.

This abundance of short-term renters coupled with a densely populated area makes for a shabby looking area, Pryor said.

"We feel we can work on the physical appearance of the neighborhood," she said. "It doesn't have to look like no one cares about it."

The proposed dog and skateboard bans are in response to making the West University neighborhood more enticing to long-term residents, Pryor said.

The ban was designed not only by city officials but also with the input of local business owners.

"Area businesses are interested in taking this step," she said. "It's not unprecedented."

However Izzie Harbaugh, the manager of Mother Kali's Books, said she has not been approached by the city and that dogs and skate boarders have not presented a problem to her business.

"A ban doesn't really seem fair," she said. "I can't say that [dogs or skate boarders on this street] have hurt the business. Sure, they irritate me sometimes, but they are just one of the situations of having a business located here."
