Oregon hunting supporters focus on animal rights activist

■ HUNTERS: Voters' Pamphlet included foe's biography and criminal record for protests

The Associated Press

MEDFORD — A vegetarian who has protested animal research says a Voters' Pamphlet biography has made her a political target of hunters seeking to lift restrictions on bear and cougar hunting.

Sally Mackler of Williams says her private life is being exploited by the Oregon Hunters Association to build support for Measure 34, which would end a 1994 ban on hounds used to hunt cougars and bears or bait to hunt bears.

The hunting group included a biography of Mackler in the state Voters' Pamphlet, despite Mackler's complaints to elections officials.

Part of the biography said Mackler told a newspaper she supports break-ins at laboratories where animals are used. It also said she was arrested at a medical research lab at the University of California-San Diego and said when her probation ended that she probably would break the law again.

The biography also said she founded a Southern California chapter of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, which the advertisement said seeks to ban all hunting and fishing.

Duane Dungannon of Talent, spokesman for the hunting group, said Mackler's private beliefs were included in the state Voters' Pamphlet because they are campaign issues.

Mackler said her personal choices have been made into a diversion from the purpose of the measure.

"Their politics are in the gutter, just like their sport is," she said. "I think this will backfire on them."

If approved, Measure 34 would repeal all laws regarding fishing, hunting and trapping other than those set by the Legislature or the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission.

The measure also would grant the commission exclusive authority to manage Oregon wildlife and regulate the times, places and manner in which fishing, hunting and trapping are allowed.

A state attorney general's office review cleared Mackler's biography as falling within the broad legal guidelines for pamphlet arguments, said State Elections Director Colleen Sealock.

Still, officials have never "seen anything quite like this," Sealock said. But they felt the hunting association's biography had to be permitted.

"Unfortunately, the statutes don't give us any legal authority to enter into the free-speech issue here," Sealock said.
