

Student artists can win $200 for poster

University students can win $200 for the design of a Martin Luther King Jr. poster that will be displayed a campus-wide celebration next month.

"We want this year's event to focus on how far we've come in realizing King's dream of an integrated America," said Martin Kaufman, dean of education and coordinating committee co-chair.

The poster must be based on King's "Realizing the Dream" theme and be submitted in both color and black and white. Other design requirements include:

- 11 inches by 17 inches.
 - Submitted on a board, in a sealed envelope, with identification on the back.
 - Text must include affirmative action and Americans with Disabilities Act statements as required for all University publications.
 - Text must also include the "Realizing the Dream," title with the words "in Celebration of Martin Luther King Jr.," and "Week of Jan. 13-18."
 - Design must provide space to list locations and panel members.
 - Specifications for paper and ink must be noted.
- Submit entries to art professor

University proposes new computer center

The University has proposed a state-wide computing center in Portland that would coordinate the Computer Science programs at the University, Oregon State University and Portland State University.

The three universities would still provide courses on their respective campuses. However, the new school would raise the University's visibility in the Portland area, University officials said.

Reasons behind the proposed change include the need for more computer science, computer engineering and software engineering graduates in Oregon and for better continuing education and training for current employees and high-tech firms.

Using Avalanche Transceivers

One component of the Allard and Casey Memorial Safety Library is Ortovox Avalanche Transceivers. In a full burial wilderness avalanche incident, only immediate and effective search and rescue be companions offer real chance of survival. An avalanche beacon used properly, can be a powerful tool for recovery. This clinic will cover the basics of avalanche rescue procedures, including hands-on use of the library transceivers. Remember, carry avalanche transceivers to lower your risk profile, not as an excuse to take risks! Free clinic. Thursday, Nov. 14, 7:30 P.M., Outdoor Program Barn
