PFC tries to give more money to handle higher minimum wage

■ FINANCE: Lacking needed information, one student group was sent home empty-handed

By Dana Williams
Multicultural Issues Reporter

The ASUO Programs Finance Committee approved four budget increases and sent one group home with nothing during Tuesday night's budget hearing.

The committee awarded Sister U Project $935 for its 1996-97 budget. The group received a 10% increase. Sister U Project asked for $960. The group plans to use the money help University students support the progressive movement in Latin America. One of the groups projects is to ship seven donated computers to students at the University of San Carlos in Guatemala.

The ASUO Women's Center received a 5.72% increase from last

Groups receiving increases for their 1997-98 budget:

ORGANIZATION	AMOUNT	% CHANGE FROM LAST YEAR
Black Women of Achievement	$5,542	+1.35%
Pre Health Science Center	$857	+29.8%
ASUO Women's Center	$111,662	+5.72%
Sister U Project	$935	+10.0%

years budget, totaling $111,662. The group plans to use their increased budget money for their Women's Empowerment Conference. The PFC awarded the group $35 more than they requested. This increase accounts for a state mandated increase in wage, the PFC's attempts to standardize stipends at $100 for groups the size of the Women's Center and a state mandated allotment for postage.

The PFC awarded the Pre-Health Science Center $857, an increase of 29.8% from 1996-97.

The group requested $882. The group asked for the increase to get more involvement from community doctors.

The PFC awarded Black Women of Achievement's request for $5468, an increase of 1.35%.

The Journalism School's American Advertising Federation/ Ad Team went home empty-handed despite support from a dozen members, because they did not provide the committee with needed information. The group's hearing is rescheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 28 at 7:45 p.m.

Cross: Judge will hear from both sides

the cross in its current location, she said.

"It could underscore the importance of taking time and having a purposeful, thoughtful process for finding a new home for the cross," Swanson Gribbskov said.

The Eugene-based American Legion Post No. 3 appealed the cross case to the U.S. Supreme Court last fall. The court declined to consider the petition because it was filed 12 minutes late.

U.S. District Judge Michael Hogan will meet with city officials and people on both sides Jan. 29. Hogan will hear any final arguments and possibly issue a schedule for moving the cross.

Some residents were unhappy about outsiders trying to influence city officials.

Matthew Johnson, a Eugene lawyer, suggested the city grind it up and dump it at the home of John Alltucker, who helped erect the cross without city permission in 1964.

"I just don't believe that the government should have anything to do with religious symbols," Johnson said.
