Shelby Edwards came off the bench to help the Ducks, but Oregon still suffered a sweep at the hands of 3-12 Montana.

Struggling Ducks fail to pick up Pac-10 win

Oregon extended its losing streak to seven with losses to Oregon State and Montana

By Rob Moseley
Sports Reporter

Entering the weekend mired in a five-match losing streak, including its first four in the Pacific-10 Conference, the Oregon women's volleyball team had a golden opportunity to gain some much-needed momentum with matches against Oregon State and Montana. But the Ducks let that chance slip through their fingers when they lost to the Beavers on Friday in Corvallis and the Lady Griz on Saturday at McArthur Court.

Oregon continued a disturbing trend Friday against the Beavers, dropping the first two games, 15-5 and 15-9, before winning game three, 15-6. Against both Santa Clara and California last week, the Ducks dropped the first two games, but won the third.

However, the Ducks could not capitalize on the momentum gained in the third game Friday, and lost game four and the match, 15-4.

Alli White led the Ducks with 15 kills, while Tia Stewart and Alison Pepe each recorded 10. Pepe also notched nine digs to pace Oregon.

Heather Lowe and Magan Prieto shared the team lead for the Beavers with 15 kills each.

The loss leaves Oregon still searching for its first Pac-10 win after five matches.

Saturday night, in the Ducks' first home match since mid-September, nonconference foe Montana swept Oregon, 15-13, 15-13, 15-13. The loss dropped Oregon's record to 7-9 overall. Montana raised its mark to 3-12.

Pepe led the Ducks with 10 kills and added 10 digs for a double-double. She was the only Oregon woman in double figures in either category.

The Ducks tried a variety of substitutions in an effort to add more life to the team's play, but neither Shelby Edwards' presence in game two, nor Dani Cordova's in game three could provide enough spark to lead Oregon to a win.

Oregon will try to recover and win its first Pac-10 match at home this week against USC on Thursday and UCLA on Friday.
