

Ducks still looking for a win

Oregon remains winless in the Pac-10 following weekend losses to Washington and Washington State

By Alex Pond
Sports Reporter

Two more road games, two more losses for the Oregon Ducks.

The winless streak for the Oregon women's soccer team reached eight games with a pair of losses in the state of Washington over the weekend. The Ducks (3-9-1 overall, 0-2 Pacific-10 Conference) got shut out 3-0 Friday at Washington and fell 3-1 Sunday at Washington State.

Oregon was playing the final two games of 10 straight away from home, and perhaps the five weeks of road games finally took its toll.

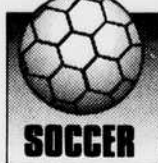

The Ducks were flat and paid for it against the Huskies on Friday.

"We were content to play less than our best," Oregon head coach Bill Steffen said.

Washington outshot the Ducks by a whopping 29-3, and as the case has been in many of Oregon's losses this season, jumped on them early.

"We were better than they were the first half," Steffen said. "The problem is that that doesn't decide the game. They converted on their chances, and we didn't convert on any of ours."

It was the third time the Ducks have been shut out this season.

Steffen said the effort was better against the Cougars on Sunday. But the results were the same.

"We did well as far as controlling things in the center of the field," Steffen said, "but we just didn't dominate penalty areas. Obviously, you can dominate the middle all you want, but that doesn't score goals. If you don't dominate the defensive third you don't stop goals."

"We're not nearly in complete recovery back to the form we had earlier, but I think we've taken a step."

Next up, Oregon will host UCLA on Friday and Southern California on Sunday. The game against UCLA will be Oregon's first in Eugene since a 1-0 victory over Portland State on Sept. 4.

Howell three seconds behind in 25th.

"We went into this race wanting to close the gap from first to fifth," Howell said. "I think we did a great job of that."

Milena Glusac (17:54) finished fourth among the Ducks and 27th overall, and Heather McMahon, Oregon's fifth scorer, finished 31st with a time of 17:59. Oregon finished with a score of 107.

"We're all very happy with the team results," Knudson said. "The race was really worth the long trip for us. It's a big confidence builder for us to know that we can compete with these top teams"

No. 1 Stanford topped the 19-team field with 39 points. The defending national champion placed four runners in the top nine.

"Stanford was pretty impressive, but they didn't look unbeatable," Howell said. "I think we ran great as a team, and that we could be a good dark horse team if we run in the NCAA Championships."

The Oregon women's team joins the Oregon men in hosting its only race of the season Sunday at Alton Baker Park. The men will compete in an 8K race at 11:15 a.m., and the women in a 5K at 10:30 a.m.
