tioned, O'Shaughnessy began to act aggressively toward the OPS officer, at which time the officer contacted the Eugene police department to issue a citation for minor in possession of alcohol.

After the OPS officer informed him of the violation and his $150 bail, O'Shaughnessy attempted to get away. The officer grabbed O'Shaughnessy by the arm, with the student then turning around to attack the officer, according to the report.

The two wrestled for several minutes before the officer was able to gain control. The officer told the man to stay on the ground. O'Shaughnessy attempted to get up, at which point the officer sprayed him with pepper spray.

O'Shaughnessy was detained and taken by Eugene police officers to the Lane County Adult Corrections facility shortly after, the report said. He was charged with assault, harassment and minor in possession of alcohol. Bail was set at $405.

O'Shaughnessy could not be contacted Sunday, and his companion did not want to comment on the incident.

Fraternity fight leads to injuries, gunshot

A fight at the Phi Delta Theta fraternity early Saturday morning led to two people being injured and one gunshot being fired, according to a police report.

At 12:02 a.m. Saturday, Eugene police arrived at the fraternity, located at 1472 Kincaid St., to investigate a fight involving approximately 20 people.

The report stated the fight began when six to 10 uninvited people arrived at the house.

A security guard hired by the fraternity asked the group to leave, at which point one of the subjects produced a handgun.

The subject then struck a member of the fraternity in the face, causing the gun to discharge. No one was hit by the gunshot.

During the fight, a security guard severely cut his arm when he fell into a window. He and the fraternity member who was struck were treated and released from Sacred Heart Medical Center.
