Ducks look to pull away from WSU

Oregon has a chance to break a tie with the Cougars for fourth place

By Tim Pyle
Freelance Sports Reporter

The Oregon Club Sports hockey team is looking to make a statement in two games against Washington State at Lane County Ice Arena this weekend.

The Ducks face the Cougars at 7 p.m. on both Friday and Saturday nights.

Oregon (8-6-1 overall, 7-5 Pacific-8 Hockey Conference) is tied with Washington State for fourth place in the conference. Southern California has a firm grasp on first place, and Stanford and UCLA round out the top three.

The first three teams and the host of the Pac-8 Tournament, which is Oregon this season, receive the four spots in the tournament Feb. 21-22. Although the Ducks are already assured of a berth in the postseason, they don't want to play the first-place Trojans in the first round of the tournament, Norman said.

If the Ducks do not improve on their current conference standing, that fate would befall them.

"We've got to come out firing on all cylinders at the beginning of the game," Norman said, pointing out the team that scores first usually wins in Oregon's games.

Norman also mentioned defensive intensity and limiting mistakes as the keys to Oregon's success against the Cougars.

"If we play smart and consistently, we'll be fine," Norman said.

The Ducks came home with a tie, a loss and a possible forfeit victory from their trip to San Francisco last weekend.

Oregon tied Palmer, a Division II San Francisco university, 3-3 on Thursday. Palmer scored a power-play goal with 24 seconds remaining in the third period to salvage a tie. Goalkeeper Stuart Robertson said the game was one of the Ducks' best performances of the season.

Friday was a different story for Oregon. Because of a malfunctioning ice compressor, the ice was soft for the Ducks' game against Stanford. The Ducks, who rely heavily upon their speed, were forced to play at the Cardinal's methodical pace, according to Norman. A 7-2 loss was the result.

The broken compressor was not fixed in time for Oregon's Saturday rematch with Stanford, and the game was canceled. Oregon may receive a forfeit victory for the cancellation.

Moseley: Cheeseheads get ready to celebrate

that decision in his first season. Packer tailback Dorsey Levens, who is only starting because incumbent Edgar Bennett tore his Achilles tendon in the preseason, reached 1,400 yards this season and can put the finishing touches on the season this weekend. And receiver Robert Brooks, who missed last season's Super Bowl and lost his No. 1 role to Antonio Freeman after a knee injury last season, has a chance to reassert himself.

So while I wish my beloved Niners were represented the NFC this season, I can't help but admit the better, and more entertaining, team will be in San Diego in their place and predict Super Bowl glory once again for Cheeseheads everywhere.

But don't despair Bronco fans. This intrepid forecaster looked into his crystal ball once before in this column, and the Mariners are decidedly not World Series champs.
