

Wildcat: Barnes praised by coaches

She started 24 of the Wildcats' 31 games in her first season. That about sums up Adia Barnes the person and player. Tell her she can't do something, then watch her do it.

But Barnes admits she was immature her freshman season, not playing for the team. Yet she averaged more than 15 points and seven rebounds.

She continued to improve each season, as did Arizona.

Her sophomore season, she helped the Wildcats win the National Women's Invitation Tournament title by averaging more than 17 points and seven rebounds.

And last season, she led Arizona to the second round of the NCAA Tournament with a first-round win over Western Kentucky.

Barnes is a natural scorer. She seems to know just the right move to get by a defender and to the hoop.

She scored only 12 points in Arizona's win at McArthur Court last season, one of two Oregon home losses, but her 11 rebounds, offensive presence and ability were obvious.

"She's just a great player," Oregon head coach Jody Runge said. "She gets so much out of what she has and is doing a great job of scoring for them."

Barnes has left an equal impression on one of Oregon's guards.

"If she gets it inside, she's going to go up strong with it all the time," Oregon point guard Natalie Hughes says. "She just works really hard at the game. You can tell she's scrapping, getting rebounds."

Scoring is Barnes' speciality, but her rebounding ability is something that often goes unnoticed.

This season, she leads the conference with 22 points per game and pulls down more than seven rebounds a contest.

Despite garnering honorable mention All-American honors last season, Barnes is still underrated, says one opposing head coach.

"Adia Barnes still hasn't gotten the respect she deserves," Nebraska head coach Paul Sanderford says. "She had 23 points and 10 rebounds against us. She does that to everybody. If she isn't an All-American, then I haven't seen too many All-Americans."

If Barnes was immature as a freshman, when the Wildcats finished 11-19 overall, she has grown into her role as their go-to player and leader as a senior.

She has twice been named Pac-10 player of the week this season, including this past week, and scored 33 points, two shy of her career high, against Arizona State last Saturday.

She says the Wildcats, who in recent seasons have seemed to have been on the brink of a breakout season, are different this season.

"Just coming into the game our confidence shows a lot more," Barnes says. "We think we can win and should win."

Against Stanford a week ago Monday, they proved that, handling the Cardinal its first conference loss in more than two years.

For a team led by a mama's girl, that's not a bad accomplishment.
