The Ducks were all smiles following their 7-1 victory over Oregon State on Wednesday and will look to carry that momentum into games against UCLA and Washington this weekend.

UO: Smith likely for second games

2 victory at Howe Field. Those walks, combined with timely hitting, enabled Oregon to keep its season-long goal of postseason play. The Ducks had six different players bat runners home in Game 2, a sign that the entire lineup is comfortable at the plate with runners in scoring position, Gamez said.

"I think we're going to have to win five of six this week," designated player Triawn Custer said before Wednesday's split with the Beavers. "We definitely need at least one from Washington."

One more victory will equal the Ducks' conference win total for all of last season. However, the team realizes that it will need more than one to keep its postseason hopes alive.

"I think we're in pretty good position right now," Gamez said. "We're 3-1 against the team that is ranked ahead of us in our region [Arizona State]. We need to remain focused."

To keep the team focused on the goal at hand, Gamez will start Jennie Cook (20-14) on the mound in the first game on both days. But don't look for the Oregon ace to pitch much more than that, as freshman Bethany Smith is coming off one of the best starts of her career.

Smith (11-8), who held Oregon State scoreless through five innings on Wednesday, will likely start the second game of both doubleheaders, with Cook and freshman Christine Birnbaum a possibility out of the bullpen.

Women: Milena Glusac will not compete

Hayward Field spectators will see the stars come out literally and figuratively for the evening session, when most of the post-collegiate athletes will compete in the finals.

While Heinonen noted that dividing the meet into two sessions will match up the best runners, jumpers and throwers, he did mention some Duck women who will be "moved around with an eye on the [Washington] Huskies next week."

Two of those women are Commissiong and Henes.

Commissiong, normally a 200- and 400-meter runner, will have a chance to work on pure speed by running the 100 meters, as well as the 4x100 and 4x400 relays. Henes will take a break from the hurdles and run in the 200 and both relays.

"I'm going to be hitting them hard next weekend against Washington, so it's kind of nice to take a break," said Henes, who will meet former Oregon Duck and Olympian Kelly Blair in the 200.

Commissiong mentioned a desire to run an 800-meter race this season but recognized the importance of competing at the shorter distance.

"When you sprint, the biggest factor is speed," said Commissiong, a law student who is currently battling final exams as well as other runners. "The better my 100 and 200 are, the better my 400 will be."

On the field, post-collegian Stacy Draglia will serve as a benchmark for two Oregon women. The American record holder in the pole vault, Draglia will go head to head with Oregon's Karina Elstrom in the vault and Jennifer Thomas in the long jump, although Draglia will more likely begin vaulting at Elstrom's personal best of 12 feet, 7 1/2 inches.

Two other Olympians, Paula Berry and Nicole Carroll, will test Oregon's Karis Howell and Katie Pearmine.

Milena Glusac, a 5,000-meter runner who was expected to return to competition this weekend after missing more than a month with a stress fracture in a vertebrae, will continue her layoff due to minor injury.
