'A' team dominates Enjoy Sierra Nevada 5-0

Jay Molde recorded his second hat trick of the season in Oregon's win

By Jeanette N. Diaz and Mirjam Swanson
Freelance Sports Reporters

Though the City of Eugene League games were postponed a week due to unplayable fields, the Oregon Club Sports men's soccer "A" team picked up right where it left off before the delay, shutting out Enjoy Sierra Nevada 5-0 at Maurie Jacobs Park last Friday.

Jay Molde was unstoppable again, pulling off his second hat trick of the season, while Cory Fleming and Paul Bach each added a goal.

The blow-out win was especially gratifying for the Ducks, said fullback Matt Harper.

"It felt good to beat a team that we normally have a hard time winning against," Harper said. "We had beaten them before but this is the first time we've actually dominated over them."

Both teams started out slow, as Molde scored the lone goal of the first half. The Ducks then picked things up a few notches, scoring four unanswered goals in the second half.

Midfielder Ben Ehlert said the lopsided score showed which team had the most endurance.

"The game went well," Ehlert said. "They were tired and out-manned."

The men's soccer "B" team traded places with its "A" team counterparts, as it was demolished by Darigold 12-1 at Petersen Barn Park last Friday.

Walter Weare scored Oregon's only goal.

Goalkeeper John Nelson said he blamed the muddy field for the slaughter.

"We played terrible," Nelson said. "The playing conditions were bad and so we got stomped."

Midfielder Matt Artley said there were some good aspects to the game.

"We scored a goal," Artley said smugly. "The good news is, we finally know everyone's name on the team."

Even though the Ducks didn't win, they still had fun, said striker Chris Reussner.

"It looks like we might win next week's game," Reussner added.

Next week the Ducks will take on a fellow cellar-dweller in Chronic United.

The games originally scheduled for May 22 will be played Friday.

The "A" team will head to Ascot Park to take on Darigold while the "B" team takes on Chronic United at Maurie Jacobs Park.

Finals will be played next Friday.

Women's soccer

With the City of Eugene League season pushed back a week, the Oregon Club Sports women's soccer team was slowed down in its quest for wins as well, dropping last Wednesday's make-up game to Flaky B.O.B. 4-2 at Ascot Park.

The Ducks played short-handed again, and were not able to bring in fresh subs for the exhausted few that did show up.

Even with the players it did have, Oregon was similar to the playing field — not in top condition. The postponement of the game caused the team to be a bit sluggish on the field, said assistant coach and fullback Erin Larson.

"We were out of it," Larson said. "We played well but they just dominated in the stamina [department]."

Midfielder Jordan Marriner said the game was a rather frustrating one.

"We have a lot of skilled players," Marriner said. "But we just don't practice together enough. If we just did, we could pull together."

On Wednesday, Oregon will play its game originally scheduled for May 27 against Tom Tech Inc. at Petersen Barn Park.

Women's lacrosse

Juliet Baker did well representing the Oregon Club Sports women's lacrosse team at the USWLA national tournament on May 23-25.

Oregon's player-coach overcame the Maryland heat and a shoulder sprain to finish the tournament with 10 goals and five assists. Her efforts helped the Northwest team finish second in the level-three bracket.

"We did pretty well," Baker said. "We won most of our games handily."

Of the six games they played, Baker's team lost only once, to the South Regional team.

"It was a tough loss," Baker said. "We lost by one goal in the last minute."

Baker played on two NCAA Division I championship teams while completing her undergraduate studies at Virginia. Playing in the tournament gave Baker the chance to return home to Maryland and see many of her old teammates, who were also at the tournament.

"Lacrosse is a small world; I saw a billion people," she said. "I got to see my family, old friends and teammates."

Utah rested and ready for Chicago

The Jazz will have an opportunity to avenge a loss to the Bulls in last season's finals

By Bob Baum
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Well rested and way past ready, the Utah Jazz finally went through a practice on Monday knowing who their opponent will be in the NBA Finals.

Now the Jazz realize that if there was ever a time they were poised to dethrone the Chicago Bulls, it is this year.

While the Bulls were sweating through a seven-game Eastern Conference finals series with Indiana, the Jazz were resting, waiting, waiting and waiting.

Now they've got a weary Chicago team coming into a series where Utah, not the Bulls, has the home-court advantage in one of the loudest buildings in the NBA.

"In the back of all our minds, it's got to be — this is the year," Utah's Greg Foster said. "We've played great. We put ourselves in a position that we always wanted to be in. So there's no excuses. If we go out there and blow it, we blow it."

And the finals are no mystery to the Jazz this time. A year ago, Utah was in uncharted territory against Chicago, but still played the Bulls tough before losing in six games.

This year, the Jazz say, they know what to expect.

"We know that every ball counts for something — every loose ball, every rebound," Antoine Carr said. "You've got to get all the little things done. If you get all the little things done, everything else will take care of itself."

But don't try to convince the Jazz that they are the favorites. Not against the Bulls, not against Michael Jordan.

"They're the championship team," head coach Jerry Sloan said. "They're the guys who know how to win, and have won, championship games."

Until you beat them, they're still the champions.

Karl Malone said he heard Chicago's Jud Buechler say the Bulls were underdogs.

"Yeah, right," Malone said. "Maybe if we were a younger team, they would have gotten us on that, but we're not going to listen to it."

Foster said he's trying not to notice how many people are picking Utah to end the Jordan dynasty.

"That just puts unneeded pressure on us," Foster said. "I still feel that we're in a situation where we have everything to gain and nothing to lose. They're the team that if the Jazz win, it's 'Oh man, what happened to the Bulls?' I still think we're the rabbit going after the hunter, as Charles Barkley would say."

Last year's loss to the Bulls is no added motivation, Jeff Hornacek said.

nacek said.

"We're not the type of team that worries about revenge," he said. "As Jerry would say, that's playing in the past. Our goal is to try to win the championship this year and really forget about last year."

By the time Game 1 tips off on Wednesday night, the Jazz will have been idle for 10 days since they completed their four-game sweep of the Los Angeles Lakers in the Western Conference finals. It's the second-longest layoff in NBA history. Only the Lakers' 12-day respite between the conference finals and NBA Finals in 1982 was longer.

Malone and Hornacek said Game 1 will go a long way in determining whether the layoff was an advantage or a hindrance.

"If we win that first game, it might give us the advantage for the future because we will be rested," Hornacek said. "But that first game will be questionable because you can go only so hard in practice. Then to go against a great team like the Bulls, it's going to be a different level of play."

The Utah players might secretly be happy that they get another chance at Chicago rather than facing Indiana. But they're not saying so.

Only Chris Morris would even hint that a championship would mean a little more if it came against Jordan, Scottie Pippen and the rest of the Bulls.

"In order to be the best," Morris said, "you've got to beat the best."

Gebrselassie sets 10,000-meter record

HENGLO, Netherlands (AP) — Haile Gebrselassie cut five seconds off the world record for the 10,000 meters on Monday with a clocking of 26 minutes, 22.7 seconds, highlighting the Adriaan Paulen Memorial track meet.

Gebrselassie ran the last nine laps with only lapped runners for company after the last of the five Ethiopian countrymen he brought with him to set the pace dropped out.

Gebrselassie shattered the mark of 26:27.85 set by Kenyan Paul Tergat in Brussels on Aug. 27.

Earlier in the meet, African runners turned in three season-best times over the middle distances.

Kenyan Wilson Boit Kipketer won the 3,000-meters in 7:36.05, beating Moroccan Brahim Lahlaoui in a close finish.

And, there was a Kenyan 1-2-3 in the 3,000-meter steeplechase as Bernard Barmasai finished first in 8:11.57, beating Julius Chelule and Patrick Sang.

Barmasai's time sliced 8.29 seconds off American Mark Croghan's previous best time of this season.

Moroccan Hicham El Guerrouj had the season's best time in the 1,500 meters, winning in 3:31.19.
