

Beasties give Intergalactic performance at Rose Garden

The Beastie Boys were joined in concert at Portland's Rose Garden on Sunday by Tribe Called Quest, who announced their Sept. 29 album will be their last

If you were one of the more than 15,000 people who crammed into the Rose Garden in Portland last Sunday, then I don't need to tell you that the Beastie Boys rocked.

If you weren't so fortunate, then let me tell you how hard it rocked. The mere sight of the trio sent fans in the upper seats plummeting down to the floor area, and caused a few brawls, but once the show was underway, the only thing people could do was dance. It didn't matter where your seat was; the energy in the building reached every crevice.

Perched on a revolving stage, the Beasties didn't exclude any side from seeing each of them in action. As they jumped the crowd jumped right along with them, and when they issued the challenge of a dance contest, the crowd could not have been more ready. Opposing sides of the arena danced as if they might actually win something for their efforts.

For the hard-core floor fans, the Beasties didn't disappoint. "Heart Attack Man" and "Tough Guy" were the most intense few minutes of the show, as people threw themselves at each other with reckless abandon and then patted each other on the back when it was over as if to say, "Right on. We made it."

There was also the perpetual crowd pleaser, "Paul Revere," which turned the arena into one gigantic karaoke bar. People were singing the song before the Beasties said the first lyric, and continued through the last line.

Some fans had an unusual way of showing their love of the band — they threw rolls of toilet paper on stage, one after the other until Ad Rock finally said, "Save some toilet paper for the people who need it." His comment didn't work. The rolls kept flying and eventually the Beastie Boys were running around with toilet paper stuck to their shoes. Now, who would want to miss that?

When they said good night, it was obvious the crowd wasn't satisfied, and it was only a matter of minutes before they returned to the hungry masses. The trio had saved the best for last. As the B-Boys returned, the arena was dark, and the crowd exploded when they performed their latest hit, "Intergalactic." The Beastie Boys finished even stronger than they started with an intense performance of one of their most popular songs, "Sabotage." Throughout the song they did handstands on their equipment and threw other pieces of it, while the crowd raged as if the night was just getting started.

"Save some toilet paper for the people who need it."

The show never lost its energy, and the only disappointing aspect was that it ended when it did. Everyone seemed ready for more, which was evident by the fact that as people filed out of the building all they could do was scream. It was the Beastie Boys at their finest.

Opening for the Beasties was A Tribe Called Quest, who announced that their Sept. 29 album would be their last. It was an announcement that prompted disappointed boos from those who could actually hear them. Following the news, they played three final songs, but the sound was a bit loud and difficult to hear. It was a definite let-down for those who may have been watching the group perform together for the last time.

Bad sound or not, the crowd seemed as excited about Tribe as they were about the Beastie Boys, and it was a perfect beginning to a show that will probably leave those who were there sore for a week.

You will find others with a shared vision, if only you look around you. You will receive a welcome source of support from a strange quarter.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Resist the temptation to do something purely for shock value. Deliberately antagonizing someone is bound to backfire on you.

A situation will arise that will force you to seriously contemplate your future. Someone new will help you steer events in the right direction.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Your brain can be the ultimate amusement park, if you just follow your imagination. Your insights might be too bizarre for the more conventional.

There is generally more than one right answer to any question. To your pleasant surprise, a twist of events will put you in the spotlight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
Try not to sound superior when sympathizing with a co-worker's problem. Rearranging your home might cure feelings of stagnation.

The best way to build a community is to freely exchange ideas. A lifelong friendship may be forged thanks to an unexpected twist of fate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
If a friend lets you down, hide your disappointment. You will soon understand the reason behind his or her seemingly thoughtless behavior.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
While you look fantastic, appearance is not the most important thing. What you do or say will leave more of an impression.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20)
The reason behind the madness will make itself known soon. Meanwhile, take a deep breath and surround yourself with good friends.

YOU BORN TODAY have a unique creative flair that affords you many interesting opportunities. However, your tendency to procrastinate often prevents you from fulfilling your potential. Spiritual and emotional fulfillment are far more important to you than material security.
