Soccer: Defense has two shutouts

always making runs, doing things and moving around a lot up front. That makes it easier for us as defenders to find people up top."

Other newcomers have made big contributions for the Ducks as well. Laurie Duhrkoop, who transferred from Hartford last season, has provided stability at center midfield. Beth Bowler, a freshman from El Cajon, Calif., has shown flashes of scoring flair at forward. Freshman fullback Starr Johnson, from Kailua, Hawaii, has started all four games at marking back and played consistently.

Then there are the usual suspects.

Goalkeeper Amanda Fox continues to add to the impressive résumé she has compiled as a Duck. After leading the Pacific-10 Conference in saves as a sophomore, Fox earned all-tournament honors while playing in a prestigious East Coast women's soccer league during the summer.

Fox has already recorded two shutouts this season, running her collegiate-career total to seven.

Forward Erin Anderson, Oregon's all-time leading scorer, has parlayed her experience into assisting on three of the Ducks' eight goals.

Sophomore forward T.J. Johnson shares time with Anderson, Baysa and Bowler up front in Oregon's new 3-4-3 formation.

Midfielders Morris, Marsh, Pam Gordon, Melissa Parker and Allyssa White are returning and logging significant minutes.

Returning fullbacks Melissa Sherman, Jori Gangnes, McLanahan, Heidi Smith and Stacy Hebert team with Starr Johnson to defend Fox's goal.

Against Wake Forest on Sept. 12, the Ducks showed they are capable of coming back against a quality opponent. After spotting the Demon Deacons, who have qualified for the NCAA Tournament in each of the last two seasons, a 2-0 lead just minutes into the second half, Oregon rallied.

Parker, a sophomore, scored her first career goal off an Anderson cross 20 minutes into the second half. Hebert tied the game up on a long, 25-yard strike with just under 15 minutes left to play.

However, Wake Forest was able to pull out a victory when Meghan

Suddes scored on Anne Shropshire's second assist of the match 2 minutes, eight seconds into overtime.

The Ducks came back the next day to dominate the Panthers.

After hitting the post twice and cross bar once, Oregon finally found the back of the net when McLanahan's fourth straight corner kick found Duhrkoop at the far post. Duhrkoop, from Milwaukie, Ore., one-touched a volley into the net for her first goal as a Duck and gave her numerous family and friends in attendance reason to cheer.

McLanahan's assist was her first of the season and came in her first game back after battling a back injury since last season.

"We had decent results considering that we didn't really play well," Steffen said of the weekend's two games. "It's a sign of our development that we can still get results when not playing our best."

Steffen and the Ducks won't be satisfied unless that improvement continues and they ultimately notch an NCAA Tournament berth this season.
