with an open container of alcohol in public on 17th Avenue and Patterson Street. The resident's friend stands nearby. As part of police procedure, Kamkar arrives on scene to stand with the friend of the resident to make sure Long isn't attacked while issuing the citation.

10:05 p.m.: Kamkar encounters University Office of Public Safety officers dealing with an intoxicated male at the EMU Amphitheater. He stops to help. The man is incoherent and believes police are going to beat him despite Kamkar's best efforts to convince him otherwise. Kamkar drops him off at the 7-11 parking lot on the corner of 13th Avenue and Alder Street where a community agency will come to pick him up.

10:26 p.m.: Loud party reported at 16th Avenue and Mill Street. Kamkar arrives on the scene and can hear people talking on a porch 150 feet away. He points to a nearby house on Mill Street.

"What if you lived there, and you were trying to get to sleep?" he asked.

Two other officers are talking to the people on the porch. Through a window in the house, residents are seen running upstairs. Kamkar walks around the back of the house to see whether any minors are trying to escape. Kamkar finds two people standing by the back door. Both individuals are of legal age and say they don't live at the address and that they do not know about any minors in the house. Police do not search the house, and Kamkar leaves soon after.

11:20 p.m.: Report of a large crowd blocking traffic on 15th Avenue and Hilyard Street. Kamkar arrives on the scene to find police parked outside an apartment complex. Down an alley, a crowd of about 50 partygoers stands outside drinking beer. Kamkar leads officers towards the crowd. Kamkar finds a keg of beer inside an apartment.

Despite the fact that the host of the party says there are no minors at the party, Kamkar and other officers find seven underage individuals. Kamkar confiscates the keg and hauls it to his patrol car with the aid of another officer.

"I usually don't carry my prisoners to the car, but ever since I worked campus, my prisoners are deadweight," Kamkar jokes.

Besides losing the keg, the party host is given warnings. Kamkar explains that because the host was cooperative, he let him go.

"We could have done so much to this guy as far as furnishing, seizing, you name it," Kamkar says as he drives off down 15th Avenue.

12:23 a.m.: Man seen dragging screaming woman into the trees near the railroad tracks past Franklin Boulevard. Kamkar searches the area. Police catch up to a man and woman in the Pizza Hut parking lot on Franklin Boulevard.

Kamkar arrives on scene and begins talking to the woman. She says she and her boyfriend have been fighting at a fraternity house nearby. Kamkar drives her to her apartment.

"Hit hit me tonight," she says. "He hit me."

Kamkar leads her to her door. She does not file a report that night.

1:22 a.m.: A fraternity toilet-papering prank at the Chi Omega sorority scares house manager. Kamkar and other officers arrive on scene. Fraternity and sorority officials sort out the confusion. No harm done.

News Brief

Violence expert to speak in Ben Linder

Lt. Col. David Grossman, a retired military psychologist and historian, will be speaking about the connections between media violence, youth violence and the U.S. military today at 9 a.m. in the EMU

Ben Linder Room.

Grossman currently teaches psychology at Arkansas State University and directs the Killology Research Group in Jonesboro, Ark.

Grossman says violent movies and television programs, along with video games, routinely expose children to many methods used by the U.S. military to increase soldiers' "kill ratios."

The University Institute on Violence and Destructive Behavior is sponsoring the event. Grossman will also deliver a free public lecture in Springfield, sponsored by the Emerald Valley Forum tonight.
