Pounding Nails Into the Floor With Your Forehead
by Eric Bogosian
Directed by Don LaPlant
Playwright Bogosian depicts contemporary America as a place overwhelmed by noise. Advances in media and technology have made it harder to escape from the noise and confusion of popular culture, or merely to think a clear, uninterrupted thought. The characters struggle to make sense of the mass of information and attitude they are confronted with. A mix of dark humor and pointed social criticism revealing the hidden humor, fear, hypocrisy, frustration and rage in everyday interactions.
