their half of the field.

Kelvin Eafon reportedly gave a rousing pregame speech that brought goose bumps to the arms of Wildcats quarterback Keith Smith, and Eafon and Smith proceeded to have the best game of their career: Smith completed eight of his 10 passes, and Eafon scored three touchdowns.

The Ducks did their traditional pregame psyche job — grouping into a circle and then jumping together while chanting some guttural phrase. Arizona did the same.

The difference was Oregon did it in the corner of its end zone, in front of its fans. A nice touch saluting the hometown fans who had made the trip, but not the best psyche job.

The Wildcats, on the other hand, did their version of the group hug at the 50-yard line.

The bottom line is, Arizona showed it was more hyped up before the game, then went out and proved it. For Oregon to win the fourth of five straight difficult games on Saturday, the Ducks must do the same.

Oregon women golfers finish fourth

The invitation to play in the Rolex Match Play Team Championships at Vero Beach, Fla., was an honor for the Oregon women's golf team.

Before the tournament, head coach Renee Baumgartner said that she wanted the team to just "have fun." She didn't want the team to worry about winning because the outcome of the tournament would not affect their season.

And throughout the three-day tournament, the Ducks did have fun; especially on the last day, when they finished ahead of half the country's premier teams.

No. 6 Oregon won four out of five matches to edge No. 4 Texas on Monday afternoon and finish in fourth place.

The Ducks' victories came from performances by Pam Sowden, Claire Hunter, Karen Bristow and Dawn Berry.

Oregon won all of its matches on Sunday to beat Furman and advance to the fourth-place bracket against Texas.

Southern California beat Oregon last Saturday in the first round of the tournament to eliminate the Ducks from championship contention.

No. 1 Duke won the tournament, beating USC by a score of 3-2. No. 2 Arizona finished third after beating No. 5 Louisiana State 4-1.

The tournament ended the Ducks' fall season. Play will resume Feb. 8-10 when the Ducks travel to the Regional Challenge in Palos Verdes, California.

Sports brief

Four men's tennis players advance to second-day competition

Four Oregon men's tennis players advanced to the second day of competition in the ITA Regional Championship in Moraga, Calif., last weekend. Only junior Guillermo Carter reached the quarter-finals Monday.

In the fourth round, Carter beat Eric Kortland from Sacramento State, 6-4, 6-4, after he won by the same score against Washington's Jeff Eicher in the third round the day before.

Freshman Bertrand Devillers also reached the fourth round by beating Matt Hibbard, of Saint Mary's College, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2. He was then eliminated by Sacramento State's Eric Kortland, 6-4, 6-4.

Other Ducks in action were senior Carlos Navarro, who fell to Washington's Andy Posavac, 6-1, 6-1, and freshman Thomas Schneider who lost in three sets, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4.
