Herman Ho-Ching, who ran for 54 yards against Michigan State on Sept. 5, might play against the Huskies.

and they finally got the chance to look at me today."

Ho-Ching said he knows what to look for in himself when deciding whether or not he'll be ready to play against the Huskies.

"The same things I did back in fall camp — run at full speed and be able to cut," Ho-Ching said.

The freshman rushed for 177 yards and two touchdowns on 27 carries in just under three games to begin the season before injuring his knee. His presence is especially necessary after the loss of Reuben Droughns for the year with a broken leg.

Increased presence from Griffin needed

Also expected to contribute more against the Huskies is wide receiver Damon Griffin, who leads the Ducks in receptions with 64 this season but had just one against Arizona and cornerback Chris McAlister.

"They did a great job of focusing on Damon Griffin," Bellotti said. "[But] we're not going to force the issue. When people are giving special attention to a player, hopefully that will open up some other avenues for us to attack."

That was the case against the Wildcats, as Tony Hartley had six receptions for 111 yards on Saturday. However, that may not be the case again against the Huskies.

"I do think it's important to give Griffin an opportunity to affect the outcome of the game," Bellotti said.

Edwards brothers up in arms on Saturday

Oregon senior cornerback Eric Edwards will see a familiar face when he looks across the field on Saturday. Edwards' brother, Renard, is a first-year cornerback for the Huskies after transferring from Walla Walla Community College.

Just sit right back
And you'll hear a tale,
A tale of a fateful trip,
That started at the Rose Bowl
Aboard a sinking ship.

The Ducks were a mighty football team,
Bellotti, brave and slick.
But the Ducks' success turned upside down
On Villegas' 10-yard kick, Villegas' 10-yard kick...

Their schedule started getting tough,
The confused Ducks were tossed,
If not for QB Akili Smith,
USC would have been lost,

USC would have been lost...

Now the Ducks are looking for a win,
But watching from the sides...
Are Droughns,
And Sirmon, too,
Aguirre and his line...

Our running backs
Latimer and Cooper,
Griffin, you'd better go wide!

OK, so maybe my song wasn't the funniest thing ever to hit the press.

But remember the end of the song has not been written yet.
The Ducks still have three games remaining this season, and each of those is an opportunity to win.

And when the Ducks play in the Las Vegas Bowl, they do not have to like it.

They can show their appreciation for not being in the Rose Bowl by crushing their opponent as ruthlessly as they were crushed by Arizona on Saturday.

Yes, Oregon was embarrassed.
We were stripped of our explosive offense, we weren't given a chance and our prestigious ranking of No. 12 was dropped to No.
21.

But look at the bright side: At least we've been able to get a few laughs in the past few weeks.
