Wide receiver Tony Hartley set an Oregon school record two weeks ago with 249 yards receiving in the Ducks' 27-22 victory against Washington.

tional motivating factor in Corvallis on Saturday.

With wins over Washington and Washington State already this season, a win over Oregon State would make Oregon the only team to defeat each of its rivals in the Northwest.

"We want to be the No. 1 football team in the Northwest, and this is the next step to achieving that," Bellotti said.

The Ducks have played all three teams every year since 1945, sweeping the series six times, most recently in 1995 and including 1987, 1980, 1954, and the Ducks' glory years of 1947 and 1948.

Injury update

Offensive tackle Marco Aguirre should see more playing time against the Beavers, Bellotti said.

Aguirre has been out since injuring his knee against UCLA on Oct. 17 but returned to uniform, albeit in limited action, against Arizona State.

"I think he'll be available for more plays," Bellotti said. "He's not completely healthy, but he's very motivated. I expect to get a minimum of half a game out of Marco, and maybe more."

But don't expect to see Aguirre play before Saturday, as Bellotti has closed practice this week.

"The substance of our practice is no different," Bellotti said. "But the idea of closing practice is somewhat traditional. It allows our kids to focus on the end of what has been an exciting season."

EUGENE SYMPHONY

the mahler cycle

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 8 PM

Mahler's soul-searching Sixth Symphony envelops us in the darkest of nights. Powerful, passionate, intensely personal, the music moves through cloud and storm in an epic struggle against man's fate. An awe-inspiring masterpiece charged with exultation and despair.
