Southwest Eugene area who donated a bag of food outside the Willamette Street Price Chopper. "I work for EWEB, and I network with a lot of people, and I just hear so many good things about their program."

Agatha Schmaedick, a Survival Center spokeswoman, said shoppers filled 10 barrels with donated food on Sunday. Supermarket shoppers donated the most at the Willamette Street shopping center, filling four barrels and several boxes with needed food.

Food collected from the "Grocery Wish List" drive will be used at the Community Thanksgiving Day Dinner at Whiteaker Elementary School. Some area businesses plan on supporting the dinner, including CD World, McKenzie-Willamette Hospital and Emerald Valley Kitchens.

Skip Hermenf, owner of CD World on 11th Avenue, said the store would be donating $1,300 to $1,400 to the community dinner. Hermenf said the money was collected as part of a CD World promotional campaign last weekend.

Schuller plans to serve food at the community dinner.

"I didn't have any family plans, so I thought I'd make someone else's Thanksgiving great," she said.

Students interested in volunteering can call 485-8179 for more information about the Community Thanksgiving Day Dinner.

as a step to reach out to us. We should not be marginalized any longer."

Nick Urhausen, a 52-year-old resident of the Churchill neighborhood, said the city manager was trying to bypass the votes of city residents who voted against the citizen review board measure. Urhausen said the inclusion of city council members on the commission was redundant considering the commission would report to the city council.

Urhausen also criticized the council for not considering adding residents "philosophically opposed" to the creation of a police commission.

Urhausen said the cost to run a police commission could be used to restore a senior citizen center.

Mike Olson, President of the UO Student Senate, said the costs of funding the police commission should not impede the democratic process.
