team was preparing for their biggest game of the season. They had a group of seniors who had never tasted a Civil War victory. And they had a group of fans who had been subjected to Duck fans, who laughed at the thought of the Ducks losing.

Oregon State has been embarrassed by Oregon for years and this year it was ready to turn the table.

So I sat through the first celebration, when the Beavers thought they had clinched the win after Akili Smith's fourth-down pass to Donald Haynes fell to the ground. Oregon State fans spilled onto the field and the barflies sang that god awful fight song. But Oregon had one more chance to redeem itself, as cornerback Andrae Holland was called for pass interference.

"Sit down Beaver fans," I thought. Now the Ducks will realize the immediacy and finish this. However, the confidence I had before was almost nonexistent. For every Oregon touchdown I cheered, there were 100 Beaver freaks cheering every Oregon State advance.

So I sat no longer. I tried to escape, but just as the fans at Parker Stadium stormed the field, these drunk, ecstatic, victorious-for-the-first-time-in-four-years fans piled out of the bar and onto the street. They yelled in my face as if I didn't just sit through the entire game with them. What could I say to quiet these overzealous Oregon State fans?

"Bowl Game?"

They wouldn't care. This was their bowl game. This was their biggest game of the season.

Women hit the road for Colorado

By Joel Hood
Oregon Daily Emerald

Having had its fill of home cooking for a while, the Oregon women's basketball team takes to the road for the first time this season to play Colorado tonight at 6 p.m. at the Coors Event Center in Boulder, Colo.

Oregon (2-1) completed its three-game home stand at McArthur Court on Sunday with a 76-58 victory against Idaho. In that game, forward Angelina Wolvert led all scorers with 16 points and helped spark a 20-2 Duck run in the second half.

Sharing the spotlight, center Jenny Mowe tallied the second double-double of her career, recording 14 points and a game-high 10 rebounds.

However, after the game Mowe said playing on the road will offer a different set of challenges.

"I think we're still trying new things, trying to shake things up," Mowe said. "This will be a good test for us. It was nice having home games to start the season, but we've got to hit the road sometime."

The Buffaloes (1-1) return eight letter winners from last season's 12-16 team. Head coach Ceal Barry has posted a 303-155 record at Colorado in 15 seasons and has led the team to eight NCAA Tournament appearances. Barry has been particularly tough on the Ducks in recent years as Oregon has dropped two straight to Colorado, the last defeat a 92-71 decision in Boulder in 1994.

One area the Ducks hope to have the advantage in is defense, where Oregon has held opponents to just 61.3 points per game. After two games, Colorado's opponents have averaged 71 points per game. But don't expect the Ducks to dominate on the boards as they have in their three previous games. The Buffaloes are out-rebounding their opponents by an average of six per game this season.
