red lights on the end of your finger tips do not constitute the advertised "laser" effect depicted on the Light Hand's box. These pitfalls can often befall unwary consumers, but fear not, we tested it for you already.

"It had a 'try me' button, so we know it's bunk," Davis said.

The combat combo would not be complete without a Star Wars light saber that expands to 36 inches. Even you can use the force for $3.

For those who like to blow things up, we suggest the recoil or shellshocked rockets by Quest. Both come equipped with a launcher, parachute, three rocket fuel packs and tiger tail lighters. It's perfect for the butte or park, but please avoid 17th Avenue and Alder Street.

Davis' pick of the season has to be the Star Wars Electronic Galactic Battle. This souped-up version of Battleship boasts space combat sounds and your favorite villains' and heroes' voices reminding you to "stay on target" and "aim when ready." The three levels allow users to rise from lieutenant commander to strategic admiral.

If shooting is your game, you can always pick up the electronic sensory target shooting game, Tin Can Alley. It comes with a six-shooter, and pot shots can be made at the targets 15 feet away.

No holiday would be complete without the classic Ouija board. To quote Bart Simpson directly: "dabbling in the black arts is always good for a chuckle."

Creative thinkers in your life may require a more artistic challenge.

Squand, underwater sculpting sand, can make anyone aquatically creative. The multicolored Squand squashes, squiggles, squirts and squishes to any student's delight.

One of our personal favorites was the Fisher Price Perfect Shot Camera. The 35mm camera, ages 5 and up, comes in red or blue with grippable handles. The photographer snaps the shots via viewfinder-like eyeholes. Durable and practical for anyone who wants to savor those holiday moments.

"Super cool," Davis said.

No gift-giving season could be complete without good eats.

The Easy Bake Oven and Snack Center and the Mrs. Field's Baking Factory may end those lonely resident hall food blues. Future Betty Crockers of all ages can enjoy cooking up a batch of double chocolate, sugar, chocolate chip or butterscotch cookies.

"Classic standard gift giving — who doesn't like cookies?" Davis asked.

Also in the same category of fun, food and too much sugar, who could leave out the Snoopy Snow Cone Machine? Many of us

Correction

The article "Student seat on animal use committee remains unfilled" (ODE, Dec. 4) should have stated that Jereme Grzybowski and Autumn DePoe are handling the grievance. Also, the quote attributed to Jereme Gibons should have been attributed to Jereme Grzybowski. The Emerald regrets the errors.
