

Orientation

State Fullerton, said there should have been two different orientations separating transfer students and new students.

Cuthbert said although her general advisement counselor was very knowledgeable about University requirements, she was disappointed that her departmental adviser wasn't present for individual registration advice.

"My general education requirements are all done, and I'm very close to graduating," Cuthbert said. "It was nothing that I couldn't do at home."

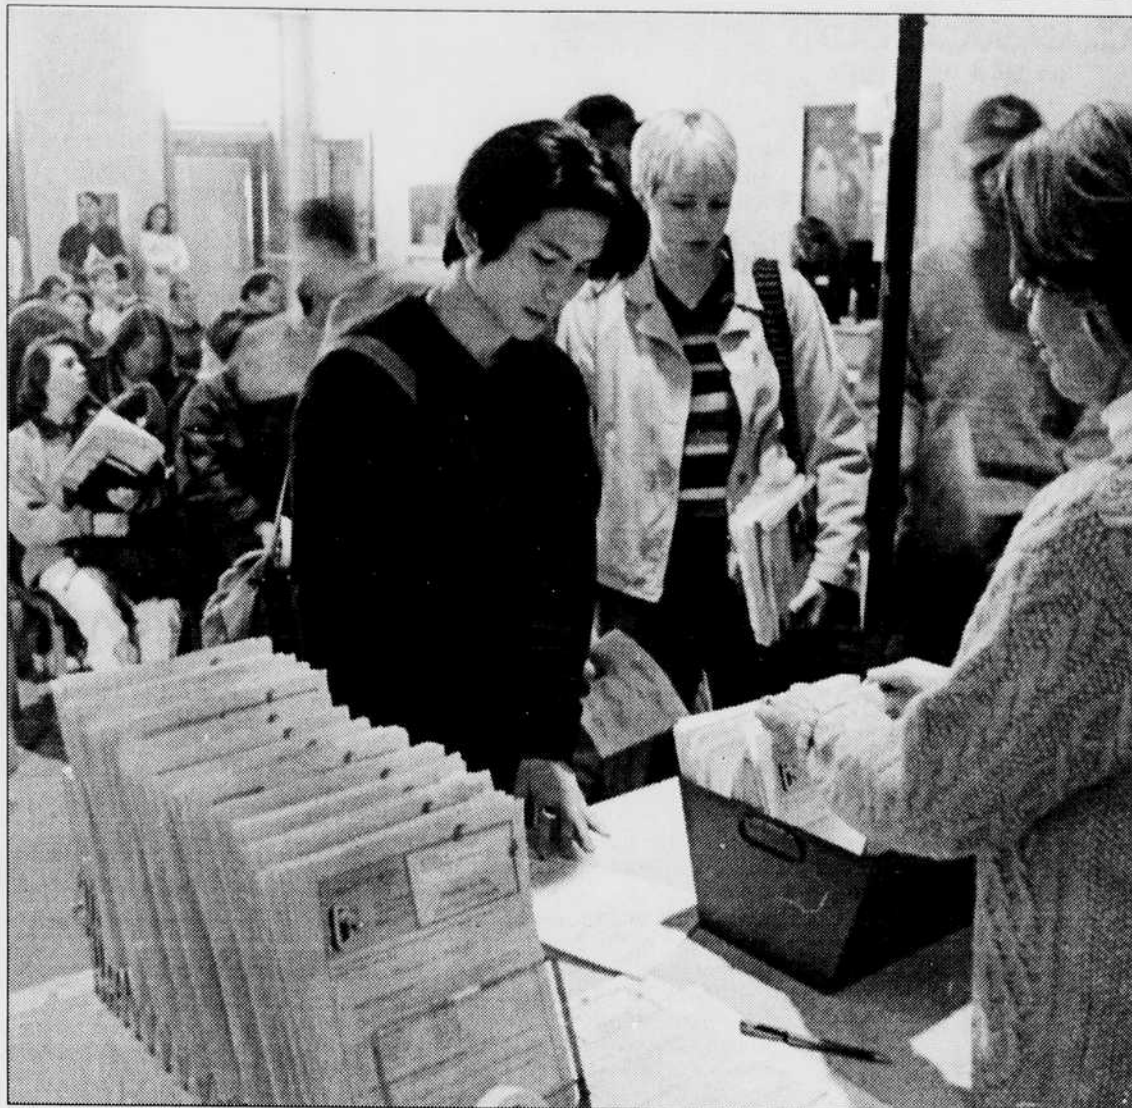

"It's good that they make people come to this for advising before giving them their registration number so they can weed out people who are not really interested."

Some students hope they've finally found a home for their college years at the University.

Hillary Shultz, a freshman pre-journalism major, said she decided on the University after attending Syracuse University and Western Oregon University.

Shultz said she didn't want to move again and she wanted to stay close to family.

"I was double majoring in journalism and management, but not ready to do all the work," Shultz said. "I came to Western, but I knew I was not going to stay. Then I just decided to stay here."

New University students registered yesterday in the EMU Ballroom. The orientation familiarized the students with University requirements. Scott Barnett/Emerald
