Students and faculty who file an informal report do not need to leave their name or have the report followed up. Roley said the reports give the task force numbers to work with.

Troy Franklin, assistant dean of student life, said that as a racial minority and a former college student he understands the importance of feeling welcome on campus.

"You all pay a lot of money to go to this school. Everyone should feel comfortable here," Franklin said to the crowd in the amphitheater.

Corcoran

Corcoran said he can better serve the student body as a liaison between the court and students who have business or grievances with the court.

Corcoran cited Senator Spencer Hamlin's Feb. 18 Emerald editorial as one reason for his frustration. In his editorial, Hamlin criticized the court's decision to hold a hearing to determine the legality of the special election.

In the editorial Hamlin wrote, "The Constitution Court has clearly violated our right to vote by postponing the special election without allowing a response from the defendants, in this case, the ASUO President Geneva Wortman."

Hamlin also said one justice was spending too much time at Rennie's Landing, a campus bar. Hamlin said the opinion piece that he wrote was meant to be his interpretation of the court's decisions.

"Sitting on the bench, there are things that a judge cannot speak about," Corcoran said. "The next time someone like Spencer Hamlin makes unfair accusations about the court's conduct, I will be able to speak to the issue."

Hamlin rebutted, "I wasn't trying to focus my criticism on the court, but on the decisions they made, and the ramifications of those decisions as they relate to students."

Hamlin said it is unfortunate that Corcoran resigned from his position.

Corcoran said the actions of the parties involved in the election controversy might prove to be the downfall of the student fee system.

"When people start making these attacks and getting people riled up, they attract the attention of the Oregon Legislature, which has the power to end the student incidental fee system," he said.

Corcoran feels that, whether they are aware of it or not, members of the ASUO Executive are part of the problem. In a posting on the ASUO news group, Corcoran expressed his frustration toward the ASUO Executive.

"In my opinion, the ASUO Exec (or, at least, Pres. Wortman) has been politically manipulated by a small group of people bent on pushing their political agenda, no matter the cost to the ASUO," Corcoran wrote.

In response, Wortman said that her record speaks for itself.

"I would disagree that I have been politically manipulated," she said. "Everything I do, I do with the best interests of the student body in mind."

"For four years now, I have been working for student issues like student fee autonomy, lower tuition and faculty hiring."

Wortman has 30 days from Sunday to hire a new member for the five-person Constitution Court. She said she will follow the formal hiring process and that applications for the position will be available in the ASUO office in Suite 4 in the EMU.
