five. Stanford then answered with four straight points to close the half.

The Cardinal took back the lead, their first since the start of the first half, on a Regan Freuen layin just seconds into the second period. Williams scored her first points of the game on the Ducks' next possession, stutter stepping between two Cardinal defenders for an inside basket.

Then Bethany Donaphin took over the game.

Stanford's freshman forward grabbed a rebound over Oregon's Brianna Meharry and lay the ball in to give the Cardinal an eight-point lead with just more than 13 minutes to play. Donaphin then sank one of her two free-throw attempts seconds later to increase the Stanford lead to 10.

Overall, Donaphin scored a career-high 20 points on seven-for-seven shooting from the field and tallied nine rebounds. Freuen paced Stanford with 21 points in more than 30 minutes of play. The Cardinal shot 45 percent from the field en route to the Ducks' most lopsided loss of the season.

Oregon, the Pac-10's top-rated defense holding opponents to just 57 points a game, allowed 80 points for the first time this season.

"The team is disappointed in the way we played," Runge said. "But they know that this is nothing we can't recover from. The big thing is that we aren't going to let this loss cost another one."

Wolvert scored in double digits for the third straight game and hit nine of 13 shots from the field. The sophomore also collected five rebounds.

"This is the third great game in a row for Angelina," Runge said. "She's worked really hard in practice and has played very well for us lately."

Wolvert scored back-to-back layins with less than two minutes to play, shrinking Stanford's lead to just nine points at 75-66. Williams brought Oregon back to within seven points with a steal at midcourt and a layin, followed by a 12-foot jumper in the paint.

But Stanford closed the game with a 6-2 run to win its 12th in a row over the Ducks at Maples Pavilion.
