ed North Carolina in a rematch of the Preseason National Invitation Tournament final from Nov. 27.

The Tar Heels prevailed in that game, etching out a 57-49 win. However, if the two teams do indeed meet again, I think the Cardinal will gain revenge. Although North Carolina is athletic and talented, Stanford's experience and balance will make the difference.

If everything continues to go according to the seeded plan at that point, the Cardinal will get another shot at revenge — this time against No. 1-seeded Connecticut, which beat Stanford, 70-59, in Palo Alto, Calif., on Feb. 6 without its leading scorer, Richard Hamilton.

Assuming the Huskies make it to the Elite Eight — a big assumption, considering their less-than-stellar postseason history — they will be clicking on all cylinders again, like they were earlier this season.

Sorry, Cardinal, but I do not see a return trip to the Final Four this year.

Pac-10 player of the year Jason Terry and Arizona (22-6, 13-5), the No. 4 seed in the Midwest Region, meet No. 13 Oklahoma in the Midwest Region.

After the Wildcats dispose of the Sooners, they will probably meet North Carolina-Charlotte, which is fresh off winning the Conference USA tournament.

The 49ers should be challenging, but Terry, a senior point guard, will not let his young team bow out too early.

However, Big 10 Conference champion and No. 1-seeded

Michigan State should prove too much for Arizona to overcome. But the battle between Terry and Spartan point guard Mateen Cleaves, both first-team All-American selections, would be classic.

Washington (17-11, 10-8), the seventh seed in the Midwest Region, might be able to give second-seed Utah a scare in the second round. If the Huskies do surprise and make a return trip to the Sweet 16, No. 3-seeded Kentucky, the defending national champion, should deflate the Dawgs.

In the South Region, fifth-seed UCLA (22-8, 12-6) should handle Detroit in the first round. But I think fourth-seed Ohio State and its sterling backcourt of Michael Redd and Scoonie Penn will send the Bruins packing in the second round.

hosting all the way to the Final Four.

UCLA essentially won the NCAA lottery on Sunday when it was awarded with a first-round game in the West bracket. If the Bruins can get by Wisconsin-Green Bay in the first round, and either Kentucky and Nebraska (two teams UCLA beat earlier this season) in the second round, they will remain in Los Angeles for the West Regional finals.

That being said, look for UCLA to knock off No. 2-seeded Colorado State in the West Regional semifinals on March 20.

Arizona was fortunate to garner a No. 6 seed after finishing fourth in the Pac-10, a full two games behind third-place Stanford, which was given a No. 7 seed by the NCAA. This one doesn't make much sense considering that Stanford beat No. 1 Purdue earlier this season and had one of the most difficult nonconference schedules in the country.

Still, don't feel too bad for the Cardinal, which battles 10th-seeded Maine in the first round.

The Cardinal is a very different team from the title contender of a few years back, but is still a very good team. It holds a 32-10 record in the tournament, but is only 4-8 against teams in this season's field.

Horoscope by Frances Drake

For Wednesday, March 10, 1999

ARIES
(March 21 to April 19)
Stake out a claim on the areas you explore at this time. You're content to be on the move at this time, but later you will need a space to call your own.

TAURUS
(April 20 to May 20)
Things shift and swirl around you; it's all you can do to keep your balance amidst the turmoil. Don't be surprised if you're in a different place at the end than at the beginning.

GEMINI
(May 21 to June 20)
Avoid the company of mavericks; the times are uncertain as it is. You can see change on the horizon; step forward to meet it.

CANCER
(June 21 to July 22)
Upon considering the pressure you are under, collapse may seem like the only option. Don't give up yet; you have inner resources of strength that have not been tapped.

LEO
(July 23 to Aug. 22)
You are the epitome of success; who could help but admire you? Use the admiration of others as a reason to excel, not an excuse to relax.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
You may feel that you are the only person who can get things done in the proper way. Have a little faith in your peers; they may surprise you if you give them a chance.

LIBRA
(Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
A business deal may be closed in an informal setting such as a restaurant or coffee house. Divide your attention between as few people as possible.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
Make sure you know the exact meaning of a word before using it in public. You may be caught saying something you didn't mean.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
A group of friends drops by for a surprise visit, and a good time is had by all. Everyone is cheerful, and you are the perfect host: charming, witty and effortlessly hospitable.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
You don't know where the signs are pointing, but you know it's somewhere new. Since no one else has even noticed any signs, you're far ahead of the game.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
You have been on your own too long. Seek out those who will understand you best. A meeting of the minds leads to positive change.

PISCES
(Feb. 19 to March 20)
Blend into the scenery and watch what unfolds before you. You become privy to other people's secret plans; don't remind them that you heard anything.

YOU BORN TODAY When you were young, you may have spent hours playing the cloud game. Even the advent of adulthood probably has not stopped you from lying on your back for hours at a time, pointing out shapes in the clouds. Imagination is one of your greatest assets, although it sometimes gets the upper hand on practicality.

Birthdate of: Edward, Prince of England; Chuck Norris, actor and martial artist; Jasmine Guy, actress.
