

University archaeologist brings Indiana Jones to life

A special presentation hopes to link the movie with a real-life scientist

Treasure maps and whips are the tools of some movie archaeologists, and real life archaeologist Dennis Jenkins will be surrounded by both during a special show for the young and young-at-heart this weekend.

University archaeologist Dennis Jenkins will be giving a presentation before a special 11 a.m. showing of "Raiders of the Lost Ark" at Regal Springfield Cinemas on Saturday morning. The special event will include demonstrations and prizes.

Springfield Cinemas' manager Jay Fullmer asked Jenkins to give the presentation so that children can learn what real-life archaeologists do.

Jenkins will show slides of University students doing field studies as well as talk about the University's archaeological field school.

"What I want to get across to the kids is that archaeology is fun, but it requires discipline," Jenkins said. "In other words, it has to be done in the right way so as not to destroy the archaeological sites that we study."

Jenkins is co-director of the archaeology and geoarchaeology field school in the anthropology and geography departments. He is also on the faculty of the University Museum of Natural History.

Jenkins hopes to get across to the kids how archaeologists visualize what was here before, how people acted and what they did, he said.

Springfield Cinemas occasionally plans big celebrations around certain movies, Fullmer said. "Raiders" is the movie they've really been wanting to show.

"The bulk of employees at the theater are totally in love with the movie," Fullmer said. "It took us a while to get this movie because there are only two prints available."

The lobby of the movie theater will be decorated with Indiana Jones material, including a model of the Ark of the Covenant, the prize searched for by Indiana and the Nazis in the movie.

Jenkins' presentation will be followed by a stunt group from Springfield High School called "Nice Girls With Whips." They will perform various stunts including extinguishing candles using their 8- to 12-foot whips.

Following the stunt show will be a prize drawing for kids who correctly answered questions from a special treasure hunter's map that can be picked up this week at the movie theater or the Museum of Natural History.

Many try for ASUO presidency

A sidewalk campaign brought out the large number of candidates

A surprisingly large number of ASUO presidential candidates have turned out for this year's spring election. On March 12, the official deadline to file for candidacy, there were 23 applicants for president. After the mandatory candidate meeting Tuesday, there are 11 candidates.

Only two of the presidential candidates are choosing to have a running mate. Dan Reid is running with Matt Swanson, and Wylie Chen is running with Mitra Anoushiravani.

The other candidates are: Brandon Hartly, William Beutler, Melissa Logan, Ed Madrid, Tamir Kriegel, Brandon Smith, Nick Bostic, Michael Atkinson and Brett Betin. If a candidate without a vice-president wins, he or she is free to appoint one following the election.

Kriegel and friend Jonathan Col-legio recruited the majority of the candidates to run, said Taylor Sturges, ASUO elections coordinator. The pair positioned themselves in front of the University Bookstore and collected signatures from potential presidential contenders.

"If they are just sort of goofing off about it, it is a waste of a lot of people's time who are involved in the election," Sturges said of the recruited candidates. "Also, it kind of takes away from the people who are serious. But if they are serious, more power to them."

Neither Kriegel nor Collegio could be reached for reaction.

The spring elections will be held April 14-15 and 21-22 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Taylor said she hopes to have a larger voter turnout than last year's 20 percent of students voting.

"It is really important for students to vote," Sturges said. "Many students don't realize how much power they have. It is important for students to get someone in there they trust."
