Festivities celebrate Asian Pacific heritage

Asian Pacific American Heritage Month kicks off today with an opening ceremony in the EMU Amphitheater from 3 to 6 p.m.

Members of the Asian Pacific American Student Union, along with other student and community representatives, will present speeches and performances relevant to the Asian culture. A line-dancing parade from the University Bookstore to the amphitheater will be complemented by hula dancing demonstrations, poetry recitals and musical performances.

APASU co-director Nicole Kuwahara said the opening ceremony will give people the opportunity to learn more about her culture and upcoming festivities.

"For me, I think this month allows the whole University as well as the community to learn more about the diverse and compelling issues going on in Asian America," Kuwahara said. "Our upcoming workshops will touch upon many of the issues in our society that everyone can relate to."
