NCAA provisional mark last Saturday in the 5,000. Challenging Davis are a pair of Washington NCAA veterans, Anna Aoki and Deeja Youngquist, who finished 17th and 20th, respectively, in the 10,000 at last season's NCAA meet.

Davis said she should be ready to go come Saturday.

"I want to go out there and put in a solid performance and feel happy about what I did," Davis said. "It will be nice because last time out I had to double. This time I will be able to race hard."

"Everyone is doing great. People are putting in great performances. Individually, I had higher expectations for myself at this point in the season, but the injury set me back. I'm happy with myself, considering."

For the second week, Heather McMahon joins Davis in running the 3,000. McMahon ran the 5,000 last Saturday and finished with an NCAA-provisional mark of 16:45.08, her second fastest time ever.

Kaarin Knudson and Katie Crabb double in the 800 and 1,500. Knudson is fresh from an NCAA time of 2:06.60 in the 800. Crabb owns season bests of 2:10.79 and 4:25.12 in the 800 and 1,500, respectively.

Nebraska is expected to dominate the jumping events. Leading the Huskers in the long jump and triple jump is Dahlia Ingram, who has NCAA marks in both events. Ingram ranks No. 2 nationally in the long jump with a distance of 21 feet, 4 inches and No. 12 in the triple jump with a mark of 42-6 3/4.

Hilary Holly and Stacy Robson represent Oregon in the horizontal jumps.

Oregon's Karina Elstrom broke into the top 10 nationally last Saturday with a vault of 12-9 1/2, tying her indoor best. Niki Reed also posted a season best of 12-1 1/2, and Holly Speight followed close behind with a vault of 12-0.

Tish Henes will run the 400 meters Saturday against Pac-10 competitor Keisha Griffis.

Nebraska's Kim Stewart, who has a season best of 12-11/2, should provide competition for Reed and Speight.

Heidi Fisk looks to better her school record of 177-9 in the hammer throw, but the Huskers' No. 5 Erin Wibbles should have an edge.
